IN THE BEE TO-DAY

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture,
Weather Bureau,
Toledo, O., Sept. 26, 1892.

There is a storm of considerable energy central over the St. Lawrence valley, moving eastward. This storm caused high winds of from 25 to 50 miles per hour at stations on Lakes Erie, Huron and Ontario, and will cause gales on the North Atlantic coast.

There is a second storm area developing over the extreme northwest, but its movement at present is uncertain.

An area of clearing conditions covers the central portion of the country, and will dominate the weather over this section during the next 48 hours.

Generally fair weather prevails over the entire country except from Lake Ontario east and north, where it is cloudy and rainy.

During the past 24 hours it has rained from Wisconsin eastward to——— and as far south as Kentucky; rains were heaviest and most general over the lake region.

The temperature has fallen over the entire country since Saturday and it will continue cool to-day and rise slowly to-morrow.

Local forecast for Toledo and vicinity—On Monday fair, continued cool. On Tuesday, fair, becoming slightly warmer.

AT FULL SPEED.

A Yacht Crashes Into a Steamer.

The Bowsprit Rips Out the Planking,

And Gives the Passengers a Scare.

Several People Seriously Injured.

The Ship-Wrecked Pleasure Seekers Picked Up and Towed to a Place of Safety by the Rosedale.

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 26.—The steamer Rosedale reached her dock here at 11 p. m. from her regular Sunday excursion trip to New York, her side badly battered, one of her crew dying and two passengers seriously injured.

All passengers were suffering from fright. The injured are: James Gregory, of Bridgeport, passenger; knocked senseless; exact nature and extent of injuries unknown.

Patrick Ellis, of Bridgeport, passenger; badly bruised about the legs.

Thomas McCarthy, fireman; skull fractured and body frightfully bruised; will probably die.

Unknown man supposed to have gone overboard from the yacht Una and to have drowned.

The Rosedale left New York at 5 o'clock and was passing Fort Schuyler at 6:30, when suddenly there were three short schrieches of her whistle, followed by a terrible crash that caused the boat to shiver from stem to stern.

In a moment the four hundred passengers were rushing about in a mad panic. Captain Weathewax shouted that there was no danger and caused the saloon doors to be closed, thus preventing several excited people, who had seized life preservers, from jumping overboard. Several women fainted.

It was found that a large pleasure yacht had struck the steamboat and her bowsprit had torn away the planking of the Rosedale between the decks from near the bow back to the paddlebox on the starboard side, and had also torn out the partitions of the boiler house. The bowsprit was broken off short and was brought to this city.

Fireman Thomas McCarthy had just stepped to the window to get a breath of fresh air when the collision occurred. He was fatally injured, his forehead being broken in and his body frightfully bruised.

James Gregory, of this city, was sitting talking with a policeman near where the bowsprit struck. He was knocked senseless and sustained injuries that are very serious.

Patrick Ellis, also of this city, was badly bruised about the legs.

While Captain Weatherwax was doing his best to calm the fears of the frenzied men and women, Pilot Davis was putting about to pick up the yacht. On coming near it was seen that the occupants of the yacht had taken to small boats. The captain who came aboard the Rosedale for a moment, declined all offers of aid, saying that he had now found that there was no danger of sinking.

They did not wish to be brought to Bridgeport but would like to be towed to Glen Cove, where they could spend the night. Their request was granted.

At this time the Rosedale people were very busy allaying the excitement of the frenzied men and women and no particulars were learned further than that the yacht's name was Una and that one of her crew who was on the bowsprit was given up as lost. Apparently she was bound for New York. All her canvas was spread.

The Rosedale passengers declare that she showed no lights and was not seen, despite her expanse of white sails, till the moment of the collision.

The Una is a sloop yacht of 125 tons burden, 40.6 feet long. She was built by C. W. Boker, of Patchogue, and was launched in 1881. She is owned by John M. Cram and belongs to the port of Philadelphia.

Gone—all the painful disorders and chronic weaknesses peculiar to the female sex. They go, with the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Periodical pains, weak back, bearing-down sensations, nervous prostration, all "female complaints" are cured by it. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless—a powerful general, as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, imparting vigor and strength to the whole system. It costs you nothing if it fails to give satisfaction. It's guaranteed to do so, in every case, or the money is refunded. It can be guaranteed—for it does it. No other medicine for women is sold on such terms.

On these terms it's the cheapest. But more than that, it's the best.

That's the way its makers prove their faith in it. Contains no alcohol to inebriate; no syrup or sugar to derange digestion; a legitimate medicine, not a beverage. Purely vegetable and perfectly harmless in any condition of the system.

GEN. HUSTED.

He Died at His Peekskill Residence.

Sketch of the Career of a Man Who Has Been Prominent in the Nation.

Peekskill, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Gen. Jas. W. Husted died at his residence here at 7:30 last night. At his deathbed there were gathered Dr. Mason, the attending physician; Mr. Husted's wife and sons, Thomas, William and J. W. Husted, jr., and his two daughters, Mrs. Frederick Shedd and Miss Husted.

Gen. Husted was taken ill on his way to the republican convention in June last. He left New York with the republican delegates, and before he arrived at Minneapolis he was taken down and it was feared that he would expire before reaching his destination. As soon as he was taken ill some of those aboard the train administered to him a dose of medicine, and it is said that it was an overdose and caused the illness from which he died.

After the convention the general was brought home to Peekskill in a special car and taken to his residence, where he remained hovering between life and death.

Sunday the general gradually grew worse, and about 4 o'clock he began to sink, dying four hours afterwards. He passed away peacefully. He was conscious to the last.

Gen. Husted was born at Bedford, Westchester county, N. Y., on October 31, 1833. He graduated from Yale college in 1854; one of his schoolmates being Dr. Chauncey Depew. He was admitted to the bar in 1857. He held many public offices, and had had the longest legislative service of any man in the history of the state, namely, 18 years. He also had the distinction of having been speaker of the house of the legislature more times than any other man, having been speaker six times.

For over thirty years Gen. Husted had been in active political life. He became a member of the republican party in 1859, and attended its national conventions as a delegate in 1876, 1880, 1884 and 1892. He had also taken an active part in the National Guard of the state, being a member of the organization and serving as judge advocate of the Seventh brigade and major general of the Fifth division.

Mr. Husted was a distinguished member of the Masonic fraternity and once held the position of grand master of that body. He was also a thirty-third degree man.

THE TYPE FOUNDRY TRUST.

A Nine-Million-Dollar Corporation to Control the Trade and Prices.

New York, Sept. 26.—The American Type Founders' company, as the newly formed trust which seeks to control the type-making industry of the country calls itself, has issued a preliminary prospectus which gives a definite idea of the magnitude of the deal.

From this document it appears that the capitalization of the trust has been fixed at $9,000,000, representing 40,000 shares of preferred stock and 50,000 shares of common stock. The 23 houses in the trust represent, it is asserted, fully 85 per cent. of the entire business of the country. Those houses are: Mackellar, Smith & Jordan, Collins & McLeester, Espelos & Co., Philadelphia; James Connors' Sons, P. H. Heinrich and A. W. Lindsay, New York; Carr & Co., John Ryan & Co.; J. G. Mengel & Co., and Hooper, Wilson & Co., Baltimore; Boston Type foundry, and Phelps, Dalton & Co., Boston; Lyman & Son, Buffalo; Allison & Smith, and Cincinnati Type foundry, Cincinnati; Cleveland Type foundry, Cleveland; Marder, Luse & Co., and Union Type foundry, Chicago; Benton, Wallace & Co., Milwaukee; Central Type foundry and St. Louis Type foundry, St. Louis; Kansas City Type foundry, Kansas City, and Palmer & Rey, San Francisco.

The officers of the organization are: President, Robert Allison, of Allison & Smith, Cincinnati; vice president, Wm. B. Mackellar, of Mackellar, Smiths & Jordan, Philadelphia; eastern manager, G. Frederick Jordan, of Mackellar, Smiths & Jordan, Philadelphia; western manager, John Marder, of Marder, Luse & Co., Chicago; secretary, A. T. H. Brewer, of the Union Type foundry, Chicago; directors, Robert Allison, Wm. B. Mackellar, Frederick Jordan, J. W. Phinney, John Marder, Cortlandt Parker.

Only three large firms—Farmer, Little & Co., and the Bruce Type foundry, of this city, and Barnhart Bros. & Spindler, of Chicago—remain outside the combination, and so far as the local houses are concerned it is asserted that they are practically in harmony with the aims of the trust, although not caring to identify themselves with it. It is generally conceded that the new organization will practically control the market. All the smaller firms will be crowded out, and those who remain outside the trust, will not attempt any serious competition.

The immediate effect of the combination, according to H. M. Hall, of the Bruce type foundry, will be to put an end to the fierce competition which has obtained in the business for the last 10 years. To begin with the rate of discounts will be reduced materially. At present many firms are giving as high as 5 per cent. discount. Prices, too, will come up. Mr. Hall holds that they should be at least 15 per cent. higher. The general impression in the trade is that the present prices are altogether too low, and that the various houses outside the new organization are prepared to accept a considerable increase in all prices with pleasure. On this account those firms which refused to identify themselves with the trust, look upon it with favor, and hold to the idea that it will have a beneficial effect on the type founders' interests at large.

WORD FROM POWDERLY

He Sees the Knights Losing Their Grip

And Favors an Amalgamation of All Unions.

Sensational Address Coming From the Head of a Once Great Organization.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 26.—The defeat of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel workers at Homestead, the failure of the switchmen's strike at Buffalo, and the defeat of the trades unionists in minor troubles throughout the country has had a tendency toward creating a sort of semi-panic among members of trade organizations and of weakening their faith in the value of combination.

This fact was recognized by General Master Workman Powderly of the Knights of Labor, who, in an address to the order, says that many unionists are speaking discouragingly of the outlook for the future, that others are depressed, and still others growing pessimistic.

Powderly urges that the time has come when trades unionists should manifest horse sense, and that the toilers should recognize each other as brothers and cooperate with each other as equals in an industrial brotherhood. He urges that the interests of the workingmen of the city and the interest of the farmers of the country are identical, and that both should go hand in hand in the cause of reform.

"How much better would it be," says Mr. Powderly, "if farmer, steel-worker, laborer, carpenter, railroader, and all who toil were united in one organization, acting under the same general rules, and so close together that the mortgage fiend of Wall street would be boycotted out of existence in his city enterprises if he dared to oppress the man on the farm, and the striking mechanic or laborer of the city would be fed by the farmer when need knocked at his door.

"Workingmen stick together very well considering the forces that work against them—a system which makes millions of tramps of the best workmen, fills our cities and towns with an army of hungry men, who rush where a strike takes place.

"The same system robs the farmer of the patronage, if I may call it by that name, of these idle millions.

"We who know better are forced to stand by and see workingmen drift into separate camps, instead of uniting in one solid compact army of industry, which should know no craft boundaries. One clock running with one set of machinery will always keep but one time. It may not always be correct, but there will be but one time kept by that clock.

"If the machinery is divided up and set behind the faces of two clocks, there will be two kinds of time in spite of all the tinkers and clockmakers on the face of the globe.

"Laboring men, wanting the same thing, deprived of the same rights, oppressed by the same tyrant, ground under the same system, struck down by the same giant-handed monster, yet organizing by detachments to meet such overwhelming odds. It is the height of folly and until we face each other as men, and recognize each other as brothers, we will be whipped in detail. The Knights of Labor still hold out the offer of universal organization, and will continue to do so until a better plan is devised."

WILLIAMS COUNTY.

Strong Democratic Ticket in the Field.

Bryan, O., Sept. 26.—At the Williams county convention held at Montpelier Saturday the democrats nominated the following ticket:

Robert Hays, prosecuting attorney.
George Walker, commissioner.
H. N. Ryall, coroner.
D. Holtzborg, infirmary director.

The ticket is strong and will command the full vote of the party.

NEED OF REFORM.

Uncle Sam Neglects His Soldiers.

Shameful State of Affairs Reported at Fort Myer Near Washington.

Washington, Sept. 26.—The garrison at Fort Myer, on Arlington Heights, opposite the city of Washington, is in a deplorable condition owing to the deficient water supply.

Fort Myer has for several years past suffered from an inadequate supply of water, both as to quality and quantity, and since the number of men at the post has been reduced to an average of 5,000 cavalry, there has been actual suffering and sickness from one year's end to the other.

At the present time the sick list is twice as large as should be expected from the size of the garrison, and of these half are of the low malarial fever brought on by the bad water. Application has been made time and again for connection with the Washington supply, but, although the cost would be only about $8,000, only the plans have laid mouldering in their grave at the war department, and in the meantime the government has lost almost the cost of the proposed connection in the loss of service of the 83 fever cases that have burdened the post in the past three years, to say nothing of the loss of three lives from the fever.

The water supply of the fort consists entirely of a spring at the foot of the hill on which the post is situated. There are there dug three wells, which in the present state of drought are pumped down to the very dregs each day to supply the drinking water for the post.

The capacity of the three tanks in the water tower whence the water is distributed is 40,000 gallons, and in the spring time, when the rain and melting snows kept the wells full, the daily consumption of the fort was 35,000 gallons. But for the past six weeks, the daily supply has been reduced to an avrag of 5,000 gallons. Th supply of water in the wells fluctuates from day to day and when pumped dry toward evening, the supply has to be cut off and these sinks allowed to fill up during the night.

The necessary daily supply for the men alone, according to statistics of the war department, should be 16,000 gallons, but now that this has been cut down to 5,000 bathing within the limits of the post has been discontinued, and the men have had to take to the river. The hospital to-day contains 75 inmates out of 400 men stationed at the post, a most astounding and alarming percentage.

TIRED OF WORK.

Columbus, O., Sept. 26—William Lyons, a Belmont county colored convict, feigned an attempt at suicide in the penitentiary by tying a sheet around his neck and inflicting injuries with a penknife. He was endeavoring to get into the hospital and be relieved from work.

CAMP LOW.

Camp Low, Sandy Hook, N. J., Sept. 26.—The doctor's bulletin this morning report. one case of diarrhoea, but not of a suspicious nature.

ONCE PROMINENT IN OHIO.

John C. Vaughan Dies at the Old Men's Home at Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 26.—John C. Vaughan died at the Old Men's Home, at Walnut Hills, to-day, at the age of 86. He was once a distinguished figure in Ohio. For several years he was the editor and part proprietor of the Cincinnati Gazette, succeeding Charles Hammond in the editorship of that paper. He was a clear and forcible writer, and in the early days of the anti-slavery agitation was a leader of the Free Soil party. His influence was conspicuous in calling the first national convention of the anti-slavery people, which nominated Van Buren and Adams, and he came within two votes of being chosen to the United States senate from Ohio to the place occupied by Salmon P. Chase. In 1845 he left Cincinnati and founded the Cleveland Leader. He was a man who lacked the faculty of doing as much for himself as for other people. He drifted west to Chicago, thence to Kansas, and a few years later he returned to Cleveland. Seven years ago he came to this city, and entered the home where he died and where every provision, care and comfort has been made by a few of his old newspaper friends of former days. His funeral will take place at the chapel of the Old Men's Home at 2 p. m. to-morrow, and the remains will be cremated. A biographical sketch of his life will be read in the crematory.

BROUGHT TO THIS COUNTRY.

An Italian Feud on Our Shores.

Once an Enemy the Hot-Headed People Never Forget It.

Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 26.—A feud which arose two generations ago in Sicily between the Del Martio and Faustutio families has been carried on relentlessly ever since.

When Michael Faustutio sailed for this country, some time ago, he took up quarters at 497 Fourth street, Jersey City, and it seemed that his life, at least, was spared the vendetta.

It was not long afterward, however, that Joseph Del Martio also reached these shores and crossed Faustutio's path.

For some months the men were drawn together by common memories, but the friendship ceased in a short time, owing to a quarrel two weeks ago.

Last night as Del Martio came out of his house he met Faustutio and several of his friends on the sidewalk. Faustutio addressed an insulting remark to him in Italian when Del Martio drew a revolver and shot him through the heart, killing him instantly.

The murderer fled while an excited crowd gathered around the fallen victim.

His young widow, attracted to the scene by the commotion, grew hysterical when she saw her husband dead before her, and shrieked and called down imprecations upon the head of the murderer while she knelt over the corpse.

Del Martio, the murderer, had in the meantime been apprehended and handed over to the police. At the station he denied having a revolver, but the officer who searched him found a 38-calibre weapon in his hip pocket. One chamber was empty.

The dead man was 25 years old and was married but six months.

FIRED ON THE FLAG.

The United States Again Insulted.

Will the Present Jingo Administration Take Notice of the Affairf

New York, Sept. 26.—Members of the group of Venezuelan revolutionists in this city claim to have private cable advices that the steamship Caracas, flying the United States flag, was boarded at La Guayra by Pulido's soldiers, who seized several passengers and the captain, whom they threatened to shoot upon interference. Several shots were fired at the flag.

United States Minister Scruggs is said to have demanded the release of the prisoners and a salute of the flag for the insult. Both were refused. It is also stated that Minister Scruggs is practically a prisoner and could not communicate with Washington. As the Caracas is due to-day the truth of the story will be ascertained.

THE END VERY NEAR.

Mrs. Harrison Growing Steadily Weaker and Hope is Nearly Gone.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Although Dr. Gardner, Mrs. Harrison's physician, reports to-night that the condition of the wife of the president is unchanged, and the family attempt in every way to give the public a rosecte view of her illness, there is really no hope for her recovery.

Her physician realizes it and the president realizes it. The end is very near. Mrs. Harrison grows steadily weaker. She has taken no solid food into her stomach for several weeks, and the sleep which she gets is not the life-giving sleep, but the stupor produced by exhaustion and opiates.

UP TO GO THE PRICES.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Chicagoans are already experiencing a foretaste of what the cost of living is likely to be a year hence when the millions of sight-seers from all parts of the globe are gathered within her borders. The price of nearly every staple article of food has been gradually advancing until they are higher to-day than ever before in the memory of the most venerable housewife, and tradespeople say that they are nothing to what they will be a year hence.

BUSINESS FAILURE.

Boston, Sept. 26.—Henry Poor & Son, leather merchants at No. 58 and 60 South street, have assigned to Edward H. Dunn, of Dunn, Green & Co. The immediate cause of the assignment was the burning of the tannery of the firm at Winn, Maine, the latter part of August. The liabilities amount to about $275,000; assets nearly $500,000.

AND RAUM REMAINS.

Washington, Sept. 26.—It is stated at the department of state that Edmund Johnson has been removed from the consulate at Kehl, Germany, for false representation as to his military services and for fraudulent practices as consul. The case has been under investigation by Secretary of State Foster for the past month and definite action was taken on Saturday.

BISHOP HORSTMANN.

Louisville, O., Sept. 26.—(Special)—M. J. Cahill, who has been in town representing the "Catholic Universe" of Cleveland, was summoned by telegraph to accompany Bishop Horstmann on his two weeks' confirmation tour.

AT GROVER'S HOME.

Buzzard's Bay, Mass., Sept. 26.—Don M. Dickinson and Josiah Quincy called on Mr. Cleveland Saturday. Mr. Dickinson reported the outlook in New York as satisfactory to the democratic party.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

Woodsville, N. H., Sept. 26.—A destructive fire broke out at Wells River, Vermont, early this morning. The hotel and other buildings have been burned and the fire is still raging.

CUTS HI WIFE'S THROAT.

St. Joseph, Mo., Sept. 26.—In a fit of jealousy John Bingham cut his wife's throat from ear to ear. She died soon afterwards. Bingham is in jail.

THE NAVY.

It Will Take Ten Million Dollars to Run It.

New York, Sept. 26.—A special to the Herald from Washington says the annual estimate for the navy for the fiscal year 1894 have been made up and will be sent to the secretary for transmission to congress.

It is thought that about $10,000,000 has been recommended for payment on account of the new navy which will come due between July 1, 1893, and June 30, 1894.

No estimates are made for new ships. This is a matter to be discussed in the secretary's report. There is a considerable speculation as to what new vessels the secretary will recommend. It is believed he will ask for another battleship and renew his recommendation for four small gunboats and several torpedo cruisers.

DRUGGISTS.

Wholesale Merchants Meeting in Montreal.

Montreal, Sept. 26.—Wholesale druggists from all parts of the United States, as well as from the Dominion, are gathering here in large numbers this morning, preparatory to the opening of the annual convention of the National Wholesale Druggists' association, and which takes place to-morrow. It is said that the action of certain eastern members of the association who have largely advanced prices of various drugs and disinfectants in view of a possible invasion of cholera, will be brought to the attention of the convention.

MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 26.—The thirty-fifth annual musical festival of the Worcester Musical association, and which has become one of the great recognized musical festivals of the country, opens this evening with a special performance in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the death of Mozart. Among the prominent artists who will take part in the festival are Emma Juch, Italllo Campanini and Myron W. Whitney.

WITH MILITARY HONORS.

Gen. John Pope Was Interred in St. Louis.

A Large Turnout Do Honor to a Departed Hero of the War.

St. Louis, Sept. 26.—The remains of Major General John Pope, who died at Sandusky, O., Friday last, reached this city on a Wabash railway train at 8 o'clock this morning. The coaches were heavily draped with mourning emblems. The casket was placed on a caisson and lay in state at the depot until 11 o'clock in order to allow the friends of the departed general an opportunity to view the remains. The coffin was artistically draped with the stars and stripes and on top lay the general's sword, sword belt, epaulettes and chapeau.

At 11 o'clock the troops from Jefferson barracks drew up before the depot and the procession formed in line and soon afterward began the march to Bellefontaine cemetery.

The order of the funeral cortege was as followse:

Mounted police, Grand Marshal Col. D. C. Young and staff, arsenel band, Jefferson barracks battalion, nearly 300 men, Col. Batsdorf's command, First regiment M. N. G., 300 men; Battery A, N. G. M., 45 men; Rev. Dr. Montgomery Schuyler; remains of Gen Pope on caisson, drawn by four appropriately draped horses; on either side of the caisson marched six sergeants as active pall-bearers. Following the caisson was the general's horse, draped in black and led by a sergeant. The saddle was in its place with the stirrups crossed and the reversed boots of the deceased in the stirrups.

The honorary pall-bearers were Gen. Beckwith, Col. J. M. Moore, Gen. A. J. Smith, Maj. Charles E. Pearse, Gen. John D. Stevenson, Col. J. W. Barriger, Maj. Miller, of the engineer corps, and Maj. Forsyth, of the United States arsenel.

Then came carriages containing members of Gen. Pope's family; the military order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, of which Gen. Pope was a member; Ransom post, G. A. R.; Sons of Veterans; friends and acquaintances of the family. The procession marched with solemn tread to the fair grounds, where carriages and cars conveyed the cortge to the cemetery. Rev. Dr. Schuyler delivered the funeral oration at the grave, and the casket was then lowered into the earth. Three volleys were fired over the grave as a military salute, and the sorrowing relatives and friends slowly left the cemetery. It has not yet been decided whether a guard will be placed over the grave.

RACES AT BOWLING GREEN.

Wood County's Fair to be a Hummer.

Big Races and a Fine Display of Everything That Makes a Fair Succeed.

Bowling Green, O., Sept. 26.—(Special)—Everything is almost ready for the opening of the largest fair Wood county has ever had.

The grand stand has a 50-foot addition and the track is in excellent condition. The fair opens Wednesday, th e28th, and will contine for the balance of the week.

Vienna, Sept. 26.—Cholera is said to be spreading in Roumania and especially in the district of Carjova.

TOOK ALL IN SIGHT.

Bold Bank Robbery in the West.

Five Men Do a Very Clever Job.

They Were After $40,000 But Had to Depart With Only a Part of That Sum.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 26.—Full particulars of the robbery of Ben E. Snipes & Co.'s bank at Roslyn Saturday reached here at 3 o'clock this morning. Five heavily armed men robbed the bank of over $6,000. It was pay day for the miners and about $40,000 arrived in Roslyn to pay the miners off. The fact that the money was coming was known throughout the neighborhood and the robbers evidently expected to secure the whole amount. The robbery was carefully planned. While F. A. Abernethy, the cashier, was at work in the bank counting out the money, assisted by F. A. Frazier, the assistant cashier, five determined looking men rode up to the door and dismounted. Two of them held the horses while the other three men walked into the bank.

It is no uncommon thing for farmers to ride into town on horseback on business, therefore no one paid much attention to these men except possibly to admire their horses, which were very fine animals.

As soon as the three men had entered the bank all of them pulled revolvers. There were two or three people in the bank and the sight of the revolvers poked into their faces soon put them to flight. One of the robbers stepped quickly to the counter, stuck his revolver within an inch of the cashier's nose and said sharply: "Throw up your hands." Abernethy did so without a moment's hesitation. At the same time Assistant Cashier Frazier found another gun pointing at him, accompanied by the same command. His hands went up, too.

Another of the three men went behind the counter and knocked down Cashier Abernethy with a powerful blow behind the ear. Abernethy fell stunned. Then while the robber who was guarding the assistant cashier was preventing him from assisting Abernethy, the two men grabbed all the money in sight and emptied it into a sack which they had under their coats.

All this time the two men on the outside had held people at bay with drawn revolvers, which they had produced the moment their confederates had entered the bank. A big crowd of people had gathered and it began to look as if the robbers would be captured. The crowd could see through the windows what was going on in the bank and became wildly excited. There were cries of "shoot them," but before one in the crowd could draw a weapon the two robbers began firing into the assembled throng. This was a signal to the three robbers inside that it was time for them to be on the move, so they took every cent in sight and rushed to the door, firing in the air as they went, in order to scare away the crowd and clear a passage for themselves. They were thoroughly desperate men, but cool and determined, and worked together as if by a preconcerted plan. The mob scattered as they came.

As soon as Assistant Cashier Frazier was left unguarded he ran to a corner and seizing a rifle fired at the retreating robbers. Frazier was nervous and his aim uncertain. He missed his man. As the bullet grazed the robber's ear he turned quickly, took careful aim at Frazier and fired. The ball struck Frazier in the hip just as he had aimed the second time with his rifle. Frazier fell all in a heap on the floor. Then the robber followed his fellows out into the street. All five jumped upon their horses and rode rapidly away to the north, firing into the air as they went.

The population of the town followed them at long range, some on foot and some mounted, but took good care to keep far enough behind to prevent being shot, for it was evident the robbers were good marksmen. The chase was a long and exciting one, but the robbers had the fleeter horses and gradually distanced their pursuers until they were lost to sight. The greatest excitement prevailed throughout the town.

It was found that the robbers had not taken the entire $40,000; they had not had time to find it. The people were dumb with amzement at the cool daring of the whole proceedure.

It now appears that the robbers did not intend to shoot any one, for they fired into the air. During all the shooting that was going on but one person was shot besides Frazier. This was a negro who was shot in the leg. Frazier would probably not have been shot if he had not first shot at the robbers. The robbers were thoroughly prepared for resistance and would have undoubtedly have killed any one resisting them. The whole community is aroused. The bank offers offers $5,000 for the capture of the robbers. Cashier Abernethy has added another $1,000. The sheriff with three posses of men is in pursuit, but so far has not captured the robbers.

SOLDIER MURDERED.

Something the Washington Papers Suppressed.

Le Roy Clark, of This City, Related a Sad Incident of the G. A. R. Celebration.

Depty Collector L. E. Clark, who returned from Washington Saturday, tells a peculiarly sad story of a murder committed during the G. A. R. celebration, and which it seems the Washington correspondents and papers have suppressed.

An old soldier from New Jersey, who occupied quarters near those of Mr. Clark, was found dead in the river one morning with his head crushed.

He was seen early in the morning in the company of two colored men, and was not seen again until his dead body was found in the river.

The object was evidently robbery, as his pockets were rifled and a gold watch and considerable money stolen. It is believed that the two colored men killed him for his money.

The peculiarly sad feature of the murder is that after going safely through a number of chief battles of the war he went to Washington to meet death under such circumstances, and that too probably at the hands of men for whose freedom he fought.

COLONEL LEE CRANDALL.

He Talks Through His Hat on Politics.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Col. Lee Crandall, who traveled with Gen. Weaver and Mrs. Lease in their tour of the southern states, in the interest of the candidates of the People's party, has returned to Washington.

Col. Crandall was an officer in the Confederate army, serving in a Louisiana regiment. He says the treatent accordedm Gen. Weaver and party in the south was a disgrace to modern civilization.

Speaking of the prospects of the People's party, Col. Crandall takes rather a rosy view of the situation. He says Weaver and Field will receive the electoral vote of Alabama, Mississippi, North Carolina, Florida, California, Nevada, Oregon, Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska and Minnesota; with good prospects of Virginia, Texas, Georgia and Arkansas. He counts Tennessee and West Virginia as certainly republican.

SEN. HILL AT BUFFALO.

He Makes Another Grand Political Speech.

Petty Jealousies, He Says, Must Be Dismissed.

"I Am Here," Are His Opening Words, "to Aid in the Promotion of Democratic Principles and to Advocate the Election of Grover Cleveland and Adlai E. Stevenson."

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Senator Hill delivered here Saturday night his second speech of this presidential campaign.

Some republicans have affected to believe that the senator aimed a covert thrust at Cleveland by refraining from mentioning the ex-president's name his Brooklyn speech until he reached the closing sentence. Saturday night Senator Hill began his address by saying that he was present to aid in promoting democratic principles and "to advocate the election of Grover Cleveland and Adlai E. Stevenson."

"Petty jealousies among democrats," the senator said, with emphasis, "must be dismissed; regular organizations must be respected." In short, the substance of his counsel to his party was to close up the lines and charge the enemy's works with a determination to conquer.

Music hall was crowded by the reunited democracy of Erie county. Leaders of the factions which, up to a short time ago have been savagely fighting one another, sat side by side on the platform Saturday night and cheered in unsion the stirring utterances of the distinguished orators.

Senator Hill was vociferously cheered as he entered the hall, the Cleveland democracy shouting as loudly as the so-called Hill democrats, and when he was presented to the great audience the demonstration was repeated.

As soon as the welcoming applause had sufficiently subsided he began his address, which was listened to with marked attention and liberally punctuated with handclapping and shouts of approbation.

Senator Hill said:

I am here to-night to aid in the promotion of democratic principles and to advocate the election of Grover Cleveland and Adlai E. Stevenson.

No apology or explanation is needed for my course. For over ten years it has been my custom at each annual election to appear before my fellow-citizens and contribute my share towards the discussion of the political questions of the hour. You did not believe that this campaign would prove an exception to the usual rule and you are not disappointed.

Federal Taxation.

The two great political parties of the country are divided upon the all-important subject of federal taxation. Unjust taxation is the essence of tyranny. It annoys the rich, it robs the poor, it interrupts business activity and fosters public discontent. The American revolution was largely produced by a little tax upon tea which our forefathers refused to pay. They incurred the perils of rebellion and the pains of outlawry rather than submit to unreasonable taxation. The best thought of the American people may well be engaged in devising the most equitable and comprehensive scheme for the proper distribution of the burdens of government. The subject becomes yearly more important as the expenses of administration annually increase.

How shall the enormous expenditures of the government be provided for? How shall its necessary revenues be raised? It is conceded by both parties that the best and easiest method of realizing the needed revenue is by taxation upon foreign imports. It is also admitted that a few internal taxes should be permitted to exist, but that the main and principal revenues should be derived from the imposition of tariff duties. Upon this point there is no substantial division of sentiment. It is true that there are some extreme men, now ostensibly acting temporarily with the democratic party, but who do not control its councils or policy, who are opposed to all tariff taxation and favor direct taxation as the best means of meeting our national expenditures, in substantially the same manner that our state taxes are raised.

There can be no reasonable doubt that tariff taxation will continue to be the permanet policy of the government, notwithstanding the opinions of these sincere but impracticable theorists who advise its abondonment.

The Precise Issue.

The dispute between the two parties arises over the extent, effect and objects of our taxation. Shall tariff taxation be imposed for revenue only, or shall it be used for the purpose of fostering private industries?

This is stating the question as fairly as I am capable of doing it. The proposition involves the power of the government, the true purposes of taxation, the propriety of the exercise of the two methods proposed, and the results produced bearing upon the taxpayer and the country. The power of the government to raise revenue by a tariff upon imports is undisputed, but its constitutional power to impose a tariff for any other ostensible purpose is questioned.

In my address in Brooklyn the other evening I presented the arguments upon which the democratic party insists in its platform, that a tariff imposed for any other than a public purpose is in violation of the constitution, and I do not care to repeat them here. I do not regard the question as a practical one, by reason of the difficulty of having it properly raised.

The conclusive and sufficient objection to a protective tariff is that it is an abuse of the taxing power of the government; it compels the whole people to pay tribute to a few; it is a system based upon injustice and unfair discriminations, and tends to build up monopolies.

The democratic position is so plain and reasonable that he who reads may understand it. It believes that the true and constitutional purpose of a tariff is the raising of necessary revenue for the support of the government—and that is all. Let the tariff be high or low as the needs of the government may require. Let it not be so high or low as to create a surplus in the treasury. The place for surplus taxes is in the pockets of the people and not in the federal treasury.

The republican position is that the government should use its powers of taxation to build up private industries by placing tariff rates so high that they will absolutely prohibit foreign importations or prevent any serious competition with such industries. The republicans believe that the question of revenue should be a minor consideration in the forming of a tariff bill, and that the fostering of some industries should be the primary one. They shut their eyes to the fact that they are unnecessarily interfering with the natural laws of trade. They ignore the value of foreign trade or assume to believe that foreign countries will trade with us although we purchase nothing from them. They forget that reciprocity cannot be one-sided. They appeal to the selfishness of the people and to their natural jealousies of and animosities against foreign countries.

The arguments of the republicans in support of this system are inconsistent with each other, they in one breath alleging that a high protective tariff keeps up prices and in another breath that it reduces them. "You pay your money and take your choice." Our opponents are as versatile and accommodating in their arguments in this respect as was the ignorant village schoolmaster who had made application to teach a country school and when examined by the local committee as to his qualifications was asked the question "whether the world was round or flat?" replied that it made no difference to him—that he would teach "that the world was round or flat, just as the committee preferred."

Effects of a High Tariff.

I am willing to concede that the first or immediate effect of a high tariff upon a new industry is usually to increase prices and stimulate business, but this effect is generally followed by undue competition occasioned by the very success incident to the favoritism shown; then over-production results, then a stagnation of business ensues, and in the end there comes a reduction of wages, a fall in prices and bankruptcy to many industries.

This is a faithful picture of the evils of protection, drawn from the business history of this country for over seventy years. It is the natural result of governmental interference in private affairs, of the blunders incident to a paternal government, and of the folly of attempting to control the natural laws of supply and demand. Stimulants to business through tariff favoritism are as unsatisfactory as the continued and inordinate indulgence of intoxicating liquors by men.

The first effect is pleasant enough, but the inevitable general result is disastrous failure and utter ruin. A gentleman once said that he liked to get drunk well enough, but the trouble arose in getting sober. Usually the more stimulants a man is accustomed to use the more he needs; and so in business, an industry which has grown up under the fostering care of a paternal government never seems to be strong enough to permit its withdrawal without a disastrous and humiliating collapse.

Why should the government by the use or abuse of the taxing power of the government attempt to build up industries where private enterprise and private capital are not willing to accept the risk?

Why should the whole people be unnecessarily taxed for half their lives and compelled to pay extravagant prices for certain manufactured articles, in order to get them somewhat cheaper during the other half of their lives? Why should the government, at the expense of all the people, offer special inducements to a few to embark upon a particular business in a field where men of genius and enterprise have of their own accord refused to enter?

I do not believe that our American manufacturers require the protection which the republican party seems to be so anxious to foist upon them, especially if they were provided with free raw materials as the democratic party proposes to do. We are already underselling foreign manufacturers in most or many of the markets of the world, and if we can compete with them abroad, especially in their own markets, there would seem to be no real necessity of taxing our people longer in order to enable our own manufacturers to compete with foreign ones at our very doors.

Neither is the pretense any longer available that protection is absolutely necessary because of the difference in wages paid in this and foreign countries. It is true that wages are higher here than abroad and the democratic party, which has always upheld the dignity of labor and which is largely composed of workingmen, rejoices in the fact and tolerates no policy which would tend to reduce them.

But if American workingmen receive higher wages it is also true that they perform better work than those abroad; they are better educated, they take a deeper and more intelligent interest in their labor; they own their houses; they are entitled to the elective franchise and are in every way better qualified to produce manufactures which can bring better prices and which are so excellent that they can at the same time successfully compete with the rest of the world.

All that America needs is a free field and a fair fight in the race of life and she will prove invincible in nearly every department of human activity. It is a narrow and contracted view, however, that seeks to keep our country from contact with the commerce of the world. The republican orator who boastingly asserts that the United States can raise and manufacture everything we need, that foreign commerce should not be sought after or foreign markets considered, and that our American farmers should be content with home markets and home prices, and that we can and should be dependent of all the rest of the world, may gratify the selfish and false pride of his hearers, but he only exhibits his ignorance of history and his lack of comprehension of the true sources of genuine prosperity.

We should not adopt any policy of administration which excludes the idea that there is more of this world than the United States and we should understand that we do not monopolize all the wealth, the industries, or the products of the world. Our policy should be dictated by an enlightened self-interest which comprehends the wants, needs and capacities not only of ourselves, but of the people everywhere.

Senator Hill then proceeded to demolish argumentatively the favorite claim of "our extreme protection friends" that a majority of the people are more or less, directly or indirectly, interested in the alleged benefits claimed to be derived from a high protective tariff.

GEN. JOHN POPE.

His Remains Taken to St. Louis for Interment.

Sandusky, O., Sept. 26.—The remains of Gen. John Pope, while lying in state in the hall of the administration building at the Ohio Soldiers' home between 10 and 11 o'clock Sunday, were viewed by many people. The body was under guard of four veterans of the home and the first to view for the last time the remains of the distinguished general, were the inmates of the home, who passed in regular order by call of cottages. Then came the citizens and finally the members of Company B, Sixteenth regiment, Ohio National Guard, after which the casket was closed. Prior to the viewing of the remains, private family services were held in the administration building.

At 11:30 a procession was formed, and under the escort of Company B, moved to the Lake Shore depot. As the carriages moved away thirteen rounds were fired, the last sounding as soon as the grounds were cleared, the flag near the administration building at the same time going to full mast. At the depot the military company opened ranks and the funeral car passed between and deposited the casket containing the body upon the platform.

The remains were accompanied to St. Louis by Gen. Manning Force, commandant of the home, John Pope, of Chicago, and Horton Pope, of St. Louis, the latter being sons of the deceased.

QUARANTINE REMOVED.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Secretary Rusk will to-morrow issue the following declaration:

To all whom it may concern: Notice is hereby given that the quarantine heretofore existing in the counties of King and Queens, state of New York, and the counties of Essex and Hudson, state of New York, and the counties of Essex and Hudson, state of New Jersey, for the suppression of contagious pleuro-pneumonia among cattle is this day removed.

OCEAN ACCIDENTS.

London, Sept. 26.—Steamer Edam, from Baltimore for Rotterdam, before reported ashore at Maassluis, was floated after discharging a portion of her cargo.

The French bark Tranquebar, Captain Cochery, from Cardiff, August 3, for Para, has been wrecked at Brazamcabank. Five of the crew were rescued and have arrived at Para. The captain and other members of the crew were drowned.

P. S. GILMORE IS DEAD.

Heart Disease Caused His Demise.

Sketch of the Great Musical Leader.

Remains Taken to New York—Regret in all Circles Expressed for His Sudden Taking Off.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 26.—Col. Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore, the world-renowned proprietor, manager and leader of the band bearing his name, died at the Linden hotel at 6:45 Saturday eveing, of hart disease due to indigestion.

Mr. Gilmore had been for several days feeling unwell and consulted a local doctor by whom he was treated for indigestion.

Saturday evening for the first time since the beginning of his present engagement at the exposition here he did not occupy his usual place and wield the baton at the band's concerts.

No one surmised, however, that his illness was of a serious nature, and but few believed the first report of his death. The remains were taken to New York.

Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore was born on Christmas day, 1830, in the county Galway, Ireland. During the days of his boyhood he showed an intense love for music. Fiddles, fifes and drums made by his own hands were his toys, and whatever was productive of melody or harmony fell upon his ear like a charm.

His parents intended him for the priesthood, but finally placed him in a large mercantile house in Ashlone. The head of the concern soon discovered that young Gilmore was devoting more time to music and musical instruments than was consistent with his duties as a business apprentice, but his talents were appreciated and he was relieved from the drudgery of trade, with the understanding that he should teach the young sons of his employer.

At the age of 15 young Gilmore was a music teacher in Ireland. Athlone being a large garrison town, there were generally three or four British regiments quartered there, and the boy could always be found among the band musicians. A retired bandmaster and famous musician named Keating took the musical prodigy in hand and put him through a course of harmony and instrumentation, so that in a short time he could play upon any instrument in the Athlone amateur band, of which he was a member and for which he composed several pieces.

It was the opinion of his teacher, Keating, that he would find a wider field for his musical abilities in America, inasmuch as he had already arrived at great proficiency on the cornet, and he accordingly determined to try the experiment.

He arrived in Boston at the age of nineteen, and at once accepted a situation in the music store of the Messrs. Ordway. His services, as a cornet player, were immediately sought for, and his first engagement was as leader of a newly organized band in Charleston. He successively led the Suffolk and Boston brigade bands, and then accepted an offer of "a thousand a year" and all he could make to leave Boston to go to the neighboring city of Salem to lead the band there, which he did with great success for four years.

Returning to Boston he organized Gilmore's band, which soon became famous throughout the country. When the war broke out he and his band went to the front with the Twenty-fourth Massachusetts volunteers. Service in the cause found Gilmore at New Orleans in 1864, where all the bands and music in the military department were placed under his charge.

Here it was that he organized what may be styled his first great jubilee, the occasion being the restoration of civic power under the stars and stripes in that city.

He projected the plan of having a chorus of ten thousand school children and five hundred musicians, with infantry and artillery accompaniments, in a grand national concert to aid in the inauguration of Michael Hahn, the first governor of Louisiana elected under the Union administration, just before the close of the war.

The loyal element of New Orleans loaded him down with gifts after this great fete, one of the gifts being a silver goblet filled with gold, presented him at a complimentary dinner given by one hundred gentlemen previous to his return to Boston.

A few years later he conceived the idea of the great "National Peace Jubilee," which was held in Boston, and its successful accomplishment was looked upon as something almost miraculous, creating, naturally, a national interest, but attracting the attention of the civilized world.

Three years after the first jubilee, which was entirely national in character, Gilmore yearned for a musical gathering which should represent all nations. With this idea he visited the chief governments of Europe, the result being that in 1872 Boston was again the center of attraction for the eyes and ears of all musical Christendom.

Never in the world's history has there been such a gathering of musicians. The chorus numbered 20,000 voices and the great orchestra 2,000 instruments. In addition to these the band of the Grenadier Guards, from London, came to represent the British, the band of the Garde Republicaine, from Paris, the French, and the band of the Kaiser Franz regiment, from Berlin, the Germans; while Johann Strauss stood up for the "Blue Danube" and Austria.

In 1873 Gilmore moved to New York and organized the now famous Twenty-second Regiment band, which, after playing for several seasons in Gilmore's Garden and making many concert tours throughout the country, even as far as San Francisco, went to Europe, and there won the reputation of being one of the finest military bands in the world.

Mr. Gilmore's musical compositions are very numerous, and some of them have given him a wide fame.

The song of "Good News from Home," written some twelve or fifteen years ago, has attained to immense popularity, having been sung the world over. Another of his compositions is the descriptive bass song entitled "The Voice of the Departing Soul; or, Death's at the Door," "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," the words of which were written by Mr. Gilmore, under the nom de plume of Louis Lambert, has been heard in every part of the world and was very popular during the war.

For the last ten years or so Mr. Gilmore was engaged every summer at Manhattan Beach hotel, where he presented admirable programs.

Mr. Gilmore might have been called a demonstrative conductor. His eyes sought out every player, his gestures were quick, but were always rewarded with prompt recognition. His natty person, gilt epaulettes, waxed mustache, his eyeglasses, gloves and baton were familiar to every one.

There are few bandmasters who have made such a name for themselves and their country as Gilmore. In Europe he wrested laurels from many competitors, and in this country he stood head and shoulders above all other leaders of military bands.

Some of his best known anthems are "Columbia," "Ireland to England" and the national air of republican Brazil. The first performance of "Columbia" was heard in the Academy of Music on December 25, 1879. Three thousand voices joined in the chorus.

REMINGTON BROTHERS' NEWSPAPER MANUAL, 1892.

We have received a copy of the sixth annual edition of the Newspaper Manual of Remington Bros., of Pittsburg, Pa., and New York. This handsomely bound volume is one of the most concise, convenient and reliable works of its kind, and from its handy arrangement of the greatest value to the general advertiser as a reference work and in the compilation of his lists.

The contents include complete lists of all newspapers and magazines in the United States and Canada, with their days of issue, politics and circulations, and properly classified lists of the principal dailies and weeklies, and the best agricultural, religious, scientific and trade publications and leading magazines. Remington Bros., recognizing the principle that the business man desires an easy-get-at-able reference work, have arranged all the lists upon the alphabetical plan both as to states, towns in the states and the several papers in the towns. In the general list population is given of each town and of the county in which it is located, and county seats are indicated by a special mark.

We have tested the accuracy of the Manual, and find it singularly free from errors. To advertisers especially it must prove invaluable, containing as it does every particular necessary for the general description of each newspaper, and so arranged as to admit of the readiest reference.

CLAIMS INELIGIBILITY.

A Point of Law Raised by the Democratic Nominee for Governor of Vermont.

New York, September 26.—Bradley B. Smalley, member of the democratic national committee, and late a candidate for governor of Vermont, announced tonight that he had made a discovery which would, if contested, give Allen, the prohibition candidate, the office of governor of Vermont. Mr. Smalley said that while Allen received but 1,200 or 1,500 votes, he was the only candidate for the position who is eligible. If the conclusions of both Chairman Carter, of the republican, and Chairman Harrity, of the democratic national committee, are correct, neither he nor Levi K. Fuller, the republican candidate who received a majority of about 19,000 is eligible.

By advice of counsel both chairmen have issued a circular letter advising any persons who may have been nominated for presidential electors, who are directors of national banks or who hold public offices of trust or profit, to withdraw, for fear that they might prove to be ineligible.

"The fact is," said Mr. Smalley, "that under this construction both Mr. Fuller and myself were ineligible, for we are both directors of a national bank. The constitution of the state of Vermont is very rigid on this point, and besides affecting Mr. Fuller's election it will also debar several members of the Vermont legislature from being sworn in."

JUDGE WERTS.

He Will Accept the Nomination for Governor.

Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 26.—It is stated this morning that Judge Werts has made up his mind to accept the democratic nomination for governor.

Invitations were sent out yesterday to Senator Barret of Essex county, chairman of the notification committee, as well as to all the members of that committee, saying that the judge would receive them at his home on Pleasant avenue in this city at 7 o'clock this evening, when he would make known his decision.

WORLD'S FAIR SOUVENIR.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Director Leech, of the mint bureau, received a telegram from Mr. Barber, an engraver attached to the Philadelphia mint, who was sent to Chicago to confer with the world's fair authorities in regard to the souvenir coins, saying that an agreement had been reached. The design adopted for the coin is the Lotto head of Columbus for obverse and caravet, and two globes for reverse. It is probable that 1,000,000 pieces of these coins will be minted before the expiration of the present.

BRAKEMAN INJURED.

Norwalk, O., Sept. 26.—James Feeney, a W. & L. E. freight brakeman, was quite badly injured at Norwalk Junction. He ran ahead to open a switch, when he stumbled and fell on the track. Before he could arise the pilot of the engine struck him and pushed him along about two car lengths. He had two ribs fractured and was bruised all over, especially about the back and head.

FURNITURE FACTORY ASSIGNS.

Battle Creek, Mich., Sept. 26.—The Union School Furniture company, whose factory was burned a few days ago, assigned yesterday to Charles Austin for the benefit of the creditors. It is estimated that the liabilities are $225,000. The assets are thought to be ample to pay all indebtedness, notwithstanding the heavy loss sustained by the burning of the factory.

HANCOCK COUNTY DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

Findlay, O., Sept. 26.—The democratic county convention nominated the following ticket: For auditor, E. B. Metcalf; sheriff, Luther M. Myers; recorder, John C. Mitchell; treasurer, David Hosler; commissioner, Henry B. Rader; infirmary director, William Karns; coroner, Dr. J. E. Powell.

A STRIKING FEATURE

Of our Carpets is the phenomenal figures at which we are selling them. There isn't any other name for these figures—they are phenomenal. They are figures that make figures of speech superfluous. It is almost always the case that, as the temperature goes up, prices go down. We are not responsible for a fall in prices. If you know anything of values, if you know what is as good as two good things usually are, if you know an unparalleled opportunity when it comes your way, you won't make any mistake about seizing this one and seizing it in a hurry.

Cross-Petition Filed.

To-day there was filed in the U. S. court a cross-petition in which the Electrical Supply company of Cleveland sues the Put-in-Bay Light and Railroad company and the Cleveland Electrical Manufacturing company for a claim of $983.48. The object is simply to establish a claim.

Whipple Starts for Pittsfield.

Fred Whipple, manager of the company playing "O'Dowd's Neighbors," left the city yesterday in charge of Chief of Police Nicholson, of Pittsfield, Mass. He is charged with obtaining money under false pretenses. They left at 2:30 o'clock for Massachusetts.—Cleveland Leader, 25th.

Jolly Yachting Party.

Mr. and Mrs. John Weber's trim but sturdy little naphtha launch Nellie took a jolly party of young people to Monroe, Mich., yesterday. The party started at 10:30 in the morning and returned before 7 in the evening. Dinner was served on the boat. The lake was inclined to be a little sassy, but was not sufficiently rough to cause any unpleasant sensations.

No Contagious Disease Exists.

Coroner Beckwith, in his capacity as a private physician, has thoroughly investigated a house occupied by a family named Kilkourse on Robinson street. Neighbors alleged that the family was attempting to conceal a contagious disease, but the doctor was unable to discover any evidence that would justify such allegations. The report is thought to have been prompted by a neighborly feud.

Stunned by Lightning.

While sitting on the porch of his residence on lower Summit street about 3 p. m. yesterday, Walter Brown, the well-known meat inspector, received a shock from a bolt of lightning which rendered him unconscious for several minutes. He experienced no serious results except a pain in his right shoulder. The house opposite his was also struck by lightning.

Mrs Ada F. Clarke's Case.

In the case of Ada F. Clarke, past president of the W. R. C. department of Ohio, who was court martialed last winter and suspended from the order for a period of five years, brought her case before the national convention on appeal, where the verdict of the court was sustained, but sentence suspended on payment of money alleged to have been wrongfully retained by her.

The Columbia Concert.

Prof. Mohre, of Philadelphia, who is to conduct the Columbia concert, given by the Toledo Maennerchor, to-morrow evening, arrived in the city yesterday and immediately took the position of leadership. He stated that the chorus was the best he had ever heard in the west, and expressed himself as being pleased at the result of their summer work. The tickets for the concert are selling rapidly and it is sure to be a success. There will be rehearsals to-night and to-morrow afternoon at 2 and 3 o'clock.

Switchman Meets Death on the Track.

The body of Chas. Leiter, a switchman in the Lake Shore yards at Air Line Junction, was found on the track at that place yesterday morning in a terribly mutilated condition. There were no eye-witnesses to his death, but it is thought that he fell asleep on the track and met his death by being run over in the darkness. He lived with his sister at Air Line Junction, was 21 years old, and unmarried. Coroner Beckwith is investigating the case.

Out of the Workhouse for a Minute.

John Becker, alias Baker, was arrested by Detective Carew this morning after his release from the work house, where he had been confined for some time past for obtaining money under false pretenses. He will now be tried on the charge of stealing a watch a year ago last August from Erhard Amsberg, who keeps a saloon at the corner of St. Clair and Orange streets. The police officials say they have evidence that Becker pawned the watch in question in Detroit a short time after it was stolen. He was working for Amsberg at the time the watch was missed.

William McMasters Suicides.

While his mind was clouded by a temporary fit of despondency, William McMasters, who resided at the corner of Navarre avenue and East Broadway, in East Toledo, committed suicide yesterday afternoon by hanging himself to a scantling in a barn adjoining his house.

About 4 o'clock Mr. McMaster's son discovered his father's body dangling from the fatal rope. It was immediately cut down but all attempts at resuscitation were fruitless. Coroner Beckwith held an inquest this morning and rendered a verdict in accordance with the above facts. McMasters was about 65 years old.

Might Have Been More Serious.

About 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon Wm. Geitman, who resides at 109 Buckingham street, stopped in front of a house on Hawley street and picked up an old shotgun that was standing against the fence. He snapped the trigger two or three times, but snapped it once too often and the gun went off. Gus Putbrese and Wm. Ernst, of 58 and 62 Hawley street respectively, happened to be within range a short distance away and they stopped some of the shot. Ernst's abdomen was perforated and one shot went through Putbrese's nose. Neither of them were seriously hurt, however, as the load had spent its force before they were hit.

Republican County Executive Committee.

A meeting of the republican county central committee was held Saturday afternoon, and the following gentlemen were chosen as the campaign managers: James H. outhard, chairman; S. M. I. Wilcox, treasurer; E. W. McGinnis, Henry Driver, Reynold Voit, J. C. Rike, C. W. Everett, W. H. Tucker, Jacob Romeis, Louis Nunn and C. P. Griffin. It is an Ashley committee throughout with but few exceptions, these being placed to keep up the appearance of harmony, which does not exist by any means.

The Hall Family Reunes.

A pleasant reunion was held yesterday at the residence of Capt. George Skeldon, 2105 Erie street, between the members of the family of Grandmother Hall. Mrs. Hall is 81 years old. There are six of her children living—T. J. Willet and Charles Hall with their families live in Ortumwa, Iowa, where they have resided a visit. They were formerly Toledoans. The rest of the children live in and around this city. At the reunion yesterday there were present 27 members of the family, representing four generations. It was an occasion of rare enjoyment.

Two Pastors Instead of One.

On account of the rapid growth of the two Methodist churches—Clark Street and Bethany, which have worked together so pleasantly for two years under one pastor, will be separated at the annual conference which meets in Van Wert this wee, and next year each will have a pastor of its own. Bethany people have built a pretty parsonage for their new preacher and will wecome him with genuine enthusiasm and sincere cordiality. Mrs. Thomas Towers, president of the Ladies' Aid society, has been untiring to secure the house.

Lost His Pocket Book and Money.

Peter Horning, of New Bavaria, O., lost or was relieved of his pocketbook yesterday. He boarded a Western avenue car on Summit street, got off at Bridge street and then boarded a Clover Leaf freight train and rode two or three blocks to the house of Charles Schutz, on Canal avenue. Shortly after reaching the latter place he discovered that his pocketbook was missing. It contained a $20 bill and six or seven $10 bills, besides an unsigned note for $60 and a note for $30 signed by C. O. Peck and I. C. King. He offers a liberal reward for the return of the property.

Is There Contagious at Dan Segur's.

Dr. A. J. Hammer has been arrested at the instigation of the health authorities for failing to report an alleged case of typhoid fever in the house if Daniel Segur, at the corner of Bancroft and Fulton streets. Mr. Segur called on Dr. Fisher this morning and said that there was a conflict of opinion as to the nature of the disease, and therefore asked the authorities to go slow and be sure of their ground before placing and maintaining a contagious disease placard on his residence. He said he had put the matter in the hands of an attorney and proposed to have his rights protected. The case against Dr. Hammer was continued in police court this morning until to-morrow.

MISPLACED CONFIDENCE.

A Newspaper Man Loses Two Dollars Betting on Emmick's Consistency.

A representative of the Commercial interviewed Mayor Emmick last week in reference to the action of the police board in closing up the gambling houses, etc. In the interview Mr. Emmick was reported as saying that he made Ben Raitz what he was and that he (Emmick) was entitled to considerable credit for the closing of the gambling places.

The reporter immediately returned to the office and wrote up the interview before it had a chance to get cold. After he had done so and had handed the copy in to the city editor, one of his fellow reporters looked the article over and then offered to bet $2 that Emmick would deny the interview the next day.

The interviewer took the bet. That's when he made a mistake.

Sure enough, when the Bee came out in the afternoon it contained a flat denial from the mayor. The denial was authenticated, and the confiding interviewer had to instruct the stakeholder to turn over the funds to his more conservative contemporary.

All that glitters is not gold.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

What Is on the Boards for the Coming Week.

"Jane," that rollicking funny comedy, which was presented here last season to immense business, will be seen at Wheeler's opera house this evening.

"Jane" adds one more to the list of successes in the repetoire of Manager Charles Frohman, and it is the greatest comedy hit since the Private Secretary. "Jane" is full of bright comedy, bubbling over with mirth and humor, and the dialogue is both sparkling and witty. The situations are also comical in the extreme. "Jane will be presented with an excellent cast.

"Chums," a one-act comedietta, will precede "Jane" as a curtain raiser.

At the People's.

The well-known and popular Wilburs will open at the People's to-night for a week of comic opera. The program for the week is as follows Monday, Black Hussar; Tuesday matinee, Black Hussar; Tuesday night, Boccacio; Wednesday, Clover; Thursday matinee, Clover; Thursday night, Dorothy; Friday, Royal Middy; Saturday matinee, Falka; Saturday night, Boccacio.

Wonderland.

Presents a splendid bill of attractions this week, both in Curio hall and theater. Manager Moore's own Vaudeville company will be here for a week and will present plenty of amusement.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla does what no other blood medicine in existence can do. It searches out all the impurities in the system and expels them harmlessly through the proper channels. This is why Ayer's Sarsaparilla is so pre-eminently effective as a remedy for rheumatism.

SUNDAY SPORT.

It Must Be Stopped in the City of Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—The Emmets and the Innisfails, of the Gaelic Athletic association, did not play hurling at Gaelic park yesterday afternoon. They were anxious to test each others mettle, but Inspector Koch, Captain Madden and sixty-five bluecoats were present to see that no game was played, and they bowed in submission to the authority of the law. They got together, however, and with the aid of 1,000 persons who gathered within the park inclosure, held an indignation meeting, at which Mayor Washburn was vigorously denounced for issuing the mandate against their Sunday contests.

INGRAIN CARPETS.

What to buy and what not to buy—that is the question. No house can carry all patterns and styles, therefore much depends on the buyer. A large stock by no means signifies a well-selected one. The largest may be the poorest. We think we have secured the cream of the market. No undesirable patterns in the stock. This fall our stock is larger than ever before.

What we have just said about Carpets is equally true about Curtains.

DEMOCRATIC Congressional Convention

The Democrats of the Ninth Congressional District of Ohio, comprising the counties of Fulton, Lucas, Ottawa and Wood, are hereby notified to meet in convention in Bowling Green, Wood County, at 10 o'clock a. m.,

ON TUESDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1892,

for the purpose of placing in nomination a candidate for congress to be supported at the November election.

The basis of representation in this convention will be one vote for every one hundred votes, and one for every fraction of 50 and over, cast for James E. Campbell for Governor in 1891. Upon this basis the several counties are entitled to the following vote in convention:

Fulton	17
Lucas	85
Ottawa	29
Wood	46

L. C. COLE, Secretary. W. J. COLBURN, Chairman.

Democratic Judicial Convention

The Democratic Judicial Convention for the nomination of a Common Please Judge of the First Sub-division of the Fourth Judicial District will be held at Fremont, Ohio, on the 29th day of September, 1892, at 10:30 o'clock a. m. The delegates to said convention are apportioned as follows:

Lucas County	85
Ottawa County	29
Sandusky County	35
Huron County	31
Erie County	38

GEO. B. BOONE, Chairman.
J. M'CRYSTAL, Sec'y.

The Montreal Witness defines a crank to be a person of wrong-headed theories. The definition is expressive.

General Tinhorn Grosvenor will make a sounding campaign the remaining six weeks of the race in Southern Ohio.

A red hot campaign between Hodge and Tom Johnson will take place in Cleveland. Both have winning records and each is a good political fighter. Democratic Tom is confident of election.

England is looking to larger trade relations between all her colonies. The Chambers of Commerce in London have adopted a resolution favoring absolute free trade between the colonies.

In Wyoming there is a complete fusion of democrats and populists, the former endorsing the Weaver electors and the latter making no state nominations. It is believed the democratic state ticket will thus be elected and perhaps the republicans will lose their electoral ticket.

If Col. Brigham would take the trouble to get right down to bottom facts about Brailey's work in the congressional convention, his friends might not be so kindly disposed to allow Brailey to be elected auditor of Fulton county. The truth grows more and more that the big Granger was used for trading stock.

That funny man who married a Vanderbilt and edits a Sunday school daily paper in New York, says "Harrison's re-election means an plate's triumph." Now, if we really thought Bre'r Harrison could come the Lazarus act on Temescal and bring the dear infant back to shiny life there might be some hope of reconciliation should adverse political fate strike the country real hard.

The republicans are completely nonplussed by Chairman Farley's methods of campaigning. He is a close communionist in politics, has few confidants and attends to his own business. John never advertises his movements with a bass drum, but generally accomplishes what he undertakes. He assumed charge of this campaign to win and he is conducting his work on that line.

For the first time in many years Mr. Powderly has gotten entirely off the fence and declared himself in his true political colors. He always was a republican, but a trimmer for Powderly. He comes out squarely now for Harrison. Many of his ablest lieutenants—men and women, who have kept him in power in the respected order of which he is the chief, are earnestly working for Weaver. Powderly sees nothing for Powderly in the ranks of the populists.

The ways of the cartoonist are frequently heartless in the extreme. C. de Grim, who is making some very clever pictures for the New York Herald, had a fair cut of Allen G. Thurman which is labelled "one of our back numbers." The use of such language toward the Old Roman is an insult to American statesmanship and American manhood. Allen G. Thurman alive or dead can never be a back number. His life and fame will be typical in history of the best achievements of the American citizen. A statesman such as few states have reared, his fame is established for all time. The cartoonist insults the intelligence of the Herald's readers when by letter or sketch he belittles Allen G. Thurman.

The Chicago Herald says "It is not improbable that the country is on the eve of a political revolution." No doubt about it. Just such a revolution as the perpetuity of our free institutions demands. The country has stood all of republican methods of power and centralization and defiance of constitution that it safely can endure. The change will be purification by revolution, and as a political entity the republican party will not exist much longer. If by revolution the Herald has any thought that the democratic party will go to pieces, let it begin over its study of the past, and freshly learn the lessons of democracy. So long as the republic shall stand there will be a democratic party, and from father to son unto remote generations will the land marks and great principles of the rock-ribbed party be perpetuated in the glory of strength and usefulness. While liberty lasts democratic principles will endure and a democratic party will be in existence to defend those principles.

THE CHINESE REVOLT.

At last the Chinese on the coast realize that the government means business in dealing with them, and they protest as vigorously as they know how. The last proclamation of the Six Companies, which represents the wealthy class on the coast, is an insult to this country which has permitted them to live here, accumulate wealth, do nothing for the country, and curse cities where they have located in large numbers. In their present predicament the Six Companies Chinese appeal to their Emperor for assistance. They ask Tien Tie, Son of Heaven, to send an army over and lick Uncle Sam. Tien will do no such thing. He will let Sam severely alone. Meanwhile the almond-eyed pig tails must comply with the requirements of the law or take the consequences.

IF NOT, WHY NOT?

An organ of the tin plate industry says in justification of the newly fostered industry "the production of tin from American mines has no connection with the establishment or maintenance of a tin plate industry."

If not, why not? If the articles which enter into the manufacture of tin or terne plates must be imported and a heavy duty be placed on the manufactured product, then the connection between the product and the manufacture is great. And greater is the connection between the scheme and the robbery of the people in the cost of manufactured tin. The price of tinware has advanced in many items. The cost to the manufacturers of tinware has enormously increased. Ultimately the increase must fall upon the consumer, for it were folly to say the manufacturer will continue to pocket the loss. He will do no such thing and he would be a fool who would. To benefit a few companies engaged in the making of tin and terne plates the tax is imposed. To nurse the infant the whole nation is expected to furnish milk. The mother of forbearance will go dry some day and then there will be a thirsty lot of infants.

THE FORCE BILL AN ISSUE.

It is singular how the republican party runs away from the chief issue of its own making. The sectional question has been the particular gory rallying point of the party twenty-five years. When all else failed the ensanguined garment was raised aloft and the howlers fell in for duty. When the infamous Force bill passed a republican house in 1890 and was urged upon the senate by the republican president it was republican doctrine of the most hateful character. Defeated and routed at the congressional elections that year the party leaders abandoned the crusade against the south as inexpedient, and damaging to the party. Not that hatred had dissolved into love, not much, but the occasion didn't seem right for further onslaught.

Time went on until the Minneapolis convention was held. Undoubtedly there was no ante-convention determination of reviving the sectional issue, but the question forced itself to the front in the political play for the support of the southern delegates in convention. The black man's support was the bone of contention between the Blaine and Harrison leaders, and Sloat Fassett, a Blaine man, temporary chairman, made the first play in his opening speech. He commended the Force bill and paused for effect and looked over to the Mississippi and South Carolina colored delegates for response. He got it quickly. The darkies cheered themselves hoarse. From that moment the Force bill was an issue in the convention and speakers on both sides used it effectively. By the second day it was so strong that the committee on platform was obliged to take it up and embody it in the resolutions. The issue was made and there it remains.

President Harrison does not dodge the issues, though the republican press skims lightly over the fatal mistake. Harrison urged congress to make bayonet rule the law of the land and in his letter of acceptance he courageously demands the enactment of such a law. It is republican doctrine to-day, as it was two years ago. It is the expression of republican hatred of the south and everything southern. It is a matter of public knowledge that the notorious John I. Davenport, the chief federal supervisor of elections, wrote the Force bill which Cabot Lodge introduced. The bayonet is Davenport's hobby. If he had his way he would punch the Australian ballot system back to Kangaroo land and put a soldier drilled to kill at every ballot box in the south to compel a republican majority. The party that defends Davenport is no better than Davenport and its methods are no better than his methods. The Force bill is the livest issue the republicans have, but it is temporarily put under cover by the cowardly republican press for fear its unpopularity will lose votes for Harrison in November. All patriots who have faith in the blessings of peace and believe in the sovereignty of the people and the freedom of our institutions should keep the issue prominently in sight and kill the Force bill, and forever destroy sectionalism by voting against Benjamin Harrison.

FORTUNATE ESCAPE

From Another Fatal Railwap Collisiou Early This Morning.

What might have been a fearfully fatal wreck occurred about 3 o'clock this morning at an ill-fated point on the Lake Shore road.

As vestibule train No. 1 was pulling out of the city an automatic switch was thrown too soon and two or three of the coaches were derailed. The semaphore also gave the safety signal at the same time, and a freight that had been waiting on a siding to take the Clover Leaf track, started up and crashed into the derailed coaches.

The engine of the freight train was wrecked by the collision and several cars were badly damaged. The passengers on the coaches and the engineer and fireman on the colliding locomotive were shaken up considerably, but no one was injured.

The point where the collision took place was within a short distance of the place where the Lake Shore wreck occurred last November, in which so many people were killed and was also near the bridge that went down with a street car a few months ago.

CANADIAN NEWSPAPERS.

Through the kindness of A. McKim & Co., the enterprising advertising agents of Montreal, Can., we are in receipt of a copy of the Canadian Newspaper Directory, just issued by them, the first work of the kind ever published in that country. It is a book of nearly 400 pages beautifully printed, handsomely bound, and containing about all the information obtainable relative to the press of the Dominion, which now exceeds 1,900 publications.

To an American advertiser doing business across the border, this work will be of great interest. Price $2.00.

THE CORNER STONE

Of Broadway Methodist Church is Laid.

Brief History of the Organization—Contents of Box in the Stone—The Exercises Yesterday.

In spite of the inclement weather and down-pour of rain, the corner stone of the new Broadway M. E. church was laid with due ceremony.

The program as arranged, with one or two exceptions, was carried out to the letter.

The services were conducted by Rev. P. P. Pope, D. D., who delivered the dedicatory address.

Rev. J. H. Bethards, pastor of the church gave an interesting history of the church, and described the contents of the box, which was deposited within the stone.

What is now the Broadway M. E. church was originally a Sunday school established in the middle of November, 1859, by Robert and Sarah Hunter, who were at that time members of the St. Paul's church.

Services were held in the Methodist church on Whittelsey, now St. Clair street, which was owned by the German Methodists of the Fifth ward. This building still stands, but has been converted into a dwelling. The Sabbath school was established independent of any church, and at the first meeting there was not even a scrap of paper on which to keep the records. On this occasion there were nine present, including Mr. and Mrs. Hunter, the only teachers. On the second Sabbath there were 16 present, on the third, 25, and on the fourth, 30. At this time the American Bible society donated the struggling organization 25 testaments.

Mr. and Mrs. Hunter were not left long to struggle alone in the good work, and soon others volunteered their services, which were gladly accepted. The first teachers were: D. N. Trowbridge and wife, N. M. Howard, Aug. Schaumelful, now living at Perrysburg, Geo. Russell, Caleb Parkinson, Anna Hall, now Mrs. Scott, all of whom are living at the present time. For five years Mr. and Mrs. Hunter never missed a Sabbath. He was drafted into the service, and served six months, and during his absence, Rev. Tiedman, a local preacher, had charge of the now growing Sabbath school. Upon his return, Mr. Hunter again took charge and pressed forward in the work. From 1859 to 1866, what is now the Broadway M. E. church, was the Toledo mission Sunday school.

In January, 1866, Rev. Rolla Chubb came to the mission as preacher in charge, on a salary of $350. This event marks the establishment of the church. The first member to join was Mrs. Hannah Barr, who lives on Oliver street, and is still a member of the church. Later on Mr. and Mrs. Hunter took letters from St. Paul's church and became members of the new church.

The report of the new congregation given at a conference held at Galion, August 28 to September 23, 1866, showed 13 full members, 24 on probation, 1 baptism, $28.93 raised for missions, one Sunday-school, 15 officers and teachers, 119 scholars and 150 volumes in the library.

Rev. Charles H. Zimmerman was the next pastor, being in charge one year. During this time the present site on Broadway was purchased for $150, and the building which was torn down to give way to the splendid edifice now in course of construction, was erected at a cost $3,000.

During the struggle that followed this step, Robert Hunter was at the head of the enterprise, and personally gave $1,000 in cash.

The church at this time was called the Centenery M. E. church. The pastors in charge from that time to the present were: Rev. Arkinson Berry, two years; W. W. Winter, two years; Rev. Abel N. Corey, three years; and during his pastorate the parsonage was erected at a cost of $1,300; Rev. Franklin Marriot, three years; Rev. Wm. Deal, one year; Rev. T. N. Barkdull, three years; T. L. Wiltsie, three years; Rev. P. P. Pope, at present presiding elder, three years; L. C. Wiltsie, four years.

Rev. Bethards is the present pastor, and under his charge the construction of this splendid building was planned and instituted. A lot was also purchased on Field avenue and the parsonage building removed to it, costing in all $1,300. Hayes Brothers gave $500 to be applied on the parsonage lot.

The corner stone was presented by Albert Neukom and the galvenized iron box which contains the mementos, by W. T. Hoffman. The contents of the box consisted of copies of the daily Bee and other local papers; copies of several religious publications, a history of the church, list of names of the officers and building committee, a program of the services, series of resolutions adopted by the W. C. T. U. on the death of B. J. Stark, Methodist hymnal, Holy Bible, catechism, complete list of Epworth league supplies, a copy of the new discipline, constitution of Y. P. S. C. E., a number of old coins presented by Robert Hunter, and also a copy of the original Sabbath school constitution.

The services were introduced by the singing of an anthem by the choir of the Broadway M. E., Presbyterian and Oliver Place Baptist churches. The invocation by Rev. B. K. Ormond was followed by a hymn, and prayer by R. G. E. Hiller.

After another song by the choir, responsive Scripture led by Rev. G. H. Priddy and the Scripture lesson read by Rev. C. B. Hadding, a very interesting address was delivered by Rev. P. P. Pope, D. D.

Following Rev. J. H. Bethard's description of the contents of the box and the history of the church, came the formal dedication by Rev. Pope. The services closed with prayer by Rev. S. L. Roberts, the singing of the doxology and benediction pronounced by Rev. William Sheridan.

EAST TOLEDO PARKS.

Meeting of Citizens Saturday Night—What is Wanted.

Residents of the East Side met Saturday evening for the purpose of discussing the park question.

Sylvester Brown was called to the chair and W. J. Bitter acted as secretary.

W. H. Tucker, chairman of the committee appointed at a previous meeting to look up park sites, made a report.

The committee recommended the establishment of a riverside park, the purchase of land enough to procure the Collins bequest, a small tract for an interior park, all to be connected by a boulevard. He explained that the park commissioners would expend $75,000 in East Toledo, but thought $100,000 would be required. Several desirable sites were reported, and considerable discussion followed, at the conclusion of which W. H. Tucker drafted the following, which were adopted:

Whereas, The citizens committee have presented a plan for the East Side park system to the park committee; and

Whereas, The citizens of East Toledo are informed that efforts are being made to change the plans recommended by the park commissioners by the citizens of the fifth ward; and

Whereas, The proposed changes from the plans recommended would not be desirable and would not meet the requirements of the citizens of East Toledo;

Therefore, Be it resolved that we urgently request the park commissioners to adopt the plan already recommended, and to immediately secure the land formerly recommended; namely, either the 35 acres adjoining the Collins tract, or if the commissioners think that the terms of the will will be complied with, instead of 35 acres adjoining to secure a boulevard, running from the Colins tract to connect with the main park, which the committee recommended—namely, 100 acres or more in the neighborhood of the east end of Navarre avenue. This park to be connected with the Riverside park in the upper end of the ward by a boulevard, known as the Prentice property, lying between the city line and the river, and also the tract of land lying between Oak street, Fifth street, Starr avenue and Nevada street, excepting the Schaff property.

HAS AN ENEMY.

Emporia, Ill., Sept. 26.—Frank Corning, the millionaire distiller of this city, barely escaped assassination on Saturday night. While seated in his parlor a bullet crashed through the window, barely missing his head. He had received warnings of such a fate, but paid no attention to them.

STARTED IN FOR A NEW TERM.

Common Pleas Court—The Motions in the Council Cases—Grand Jury.

Common pleas court convened this morning, after the three months' vacation, and the usual opening day hustle and bustle prevailed.

Judge Pugsley called the docket to a large attendance of the bar. Judge Harmon decided a demurrer, and then empaneled the grand jury.

The motion to quash in the council cases had been set for this morning, but were continued until this afternoon, after the decision of a case set for 2 o'clock.

Judge Lemmon made assignments as follows, there being but one case assigned this week, which will be submitted to the court, as the petit jury will not be empaneled until next Monday:

Tuesday, Sept. 27.

29323—Sterling & Co. v J. O. McLaughlin.

Hebrew Organization.

Yesterday a meeting was held at 713 Monroe for the purpose of organizing a young men's Hebrew association. Mr. S. A. Schlossberg presided. The object of the organization is largely beneficial and will be devoted to literary features. The officers elected are:

President—S. A. Schlossberg.
Vice-president—Wm. B. Hubert.
Secretary—J. H. Feldman.
Treasurer—Ed N. Kraus.

The next meeting will be held at 213 Indiana avenue Wednesday evening.

Attempted Burglary.

The residence of E. D. Draper, at 1051 Grand avenue, was entered by a would-be burglar last night. The intruder gained entrance to the house through a window, but was frightened away before he had an opportunity to appropriate anything. After the discovery of the burglar Mr. Draper whistled for the police several times, but the patrolman on that beat failed to materialize and the man escaped.

On Trial, But the Buildings are Down.

S. D. Madge and wife are on trial in police court this afternoon for neglecting to obey the orders of the health officer to tear down their wooden buildings on Summit street, just below Cherry. It will be remembered that the buildings complained of were demolished Saturday by Dr. Fisher's orders.

Had Not Suicided at Last Account.

Thos. White, of 608 South Platt street, reported to police headquarters yesterday that in the morning his wife had threatened to kill herself by taking poison. She did not carry out the threat, however, and is still alive. Family trouble is supposed to be the cause of her despondency.

Both Limbs Broken.

Parks' ambulance went about five miles in the country last night after a woman who had fallen out of a swing and broken both limbs and sprained her back. She was taken to a house on Duke street, in West Toledo. She is very seriously injured.

Injured in a Mill.

Parks' ambulance was called to the corner of Brown avenue and Door street this morning to take home a man named Oliver, who had been injured in Platt's mills. The injuries consisted of a broken arm and body bruises.

LATE MARKETS.

The receipts of wheat to-day at Minneapolis and Duluth are 766,887 bu and at five other western points 781,701 bu; total 1,558,588 bu. On the corresponding Monday in 1891 the receipts at the same points were 1,373,707 bu, including 836,869, leaving as the movement from the five other points 534,808 bu compared with 781,701 bu to-day.

Export clearances yesterday at four Atlantic ports are: Wheat 110,637 bu and flour to an aggregate of 425,000 bu.

English markets are firm for wheat and corn. Liverpool wheat market 1-2d higher on wheat.

A trip into the interior furnishes us with a sight of the new wheat fields. A good deal of it is up and looks beautifully. The soil was in prime condition, and there have been timely rains.

The receipts of wheat continue to exceed last year. The total to-day at five leading points, excluding northwest wheat, exceeds 1891 by 246,883 bushels.

The wheat markets on this side of the ocean have been very firm again to-day. The only bull item we can discover in the news of the day is a firm and a little higher market in Liverpool. The receipts and increased supply are not bull items. It looks a little like a local Chicago contest to drive in the shorts. That market for December advanced at one time 1c bu., but if Cicago will advance prices and hold them we hsall be everlastingly thankful. They are not built on the "holding" very much.

Corn has also improved, and we presume the firmness is occasioned by the cooler weather, but corn will have a week of growing weather before frost comes.

In New York October wheat closed at 80 1-8 and December at 83 1-4, a gain on each of 5-8; October corn at 53 1-2, a gain of 3-8; October oats unchanged.

In Chicago October wheat closed at 74 5-8 and December at 77 1-4, a gain on each of 5-8; May at 82 1-8 and 82 1-4, a gain of 1-2. September corn at 45 7-8 and October at 46 1-8, a gain on each of 1-8. October oats unchanged.

In Toledo there has been a moderate business reported for December delivery, but with that exception the trading was light. The market may fairly be called dull and decidedly featureless. On the call December wheat sold at 78. On the regular board the opening sales were 1-4 to 3-8 up and the close 3-8 to 1-2 on September and October; 5-8 on December and May. September sold at 75 1-2 and at close that was bid; October at 75 3-4; December sold at 78 1-4 to 78 5-8 and closed at that; May at 83 1-2 to 83 7-8 and closed at that; cash wheat was not in good and the sales of No. 2 soft were not up to the usual limit. Sales at 75 to 75 1-2c, closing at that. No. 3 soft at 68 to 69c, closing at that. No. 4 soft at 61 to 61 1-2c and 64c in L. S.. Rejected No. 1 at 65 to 67c; No. 2 at 51c. No. 3 red and white at 65c. No. 1 white at 75 1-2c.

Corn—No. 2 at 46 1-2c. No. 3 at 46c. October No. 2 sold at 46 3-4c. Oats—No. 3 at 31c. Rejected at 26c. No. 3 white at 33c. Rye—No. 2 at 58 1-2c. No. 3 at 53c.

Clover seed saws fairly active but lower. On the call October sold at $6.25.

On the regular board prime for cash at $6 30; October at $6 30 to $6 32 1-2, closing at $6 30. December at $6 37 1-2 to $6 40; January at $6 40; No. 2 sold at $6 12 1-2 to $6 15. Rejected at 5 50. On Saturday last we stated that October closed at $6 40. It was an error. December closed at $6 40 and October at $6 35. See list of sales for that day.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

At Sylvania—Interesting Papers Read and Discussed.

The Sylvania Township Sunday School association held its second convention Saturady afternoon at Ginger Hill school house. W. A. Whitney, president of the township, and also a member of the county executive committee, presided.

There was a large attendance and the school house was beautifully decorated in honor of the occasion. Mrs. M. A. Barnes made the address of welcome, and County President L. B. Lake responded. The subject for the forenoon was "What Are We Doing as a School?" and was opened by an address by Thos. Gibbs, of the Sylvania school. This was followed by a general discussion on local methods employed in different schools. Mr. A. R. Crittenden then gave the second normal lesson in the course, the subject of which was "The Sunday School—Its Place and Purpose in History." A picnic dinner was then enjoyed at a neighoring vacant house.

The afternoon session opened with a paper presented by Miss Kate Otjen on "Laborers," followed by a talk on "Practical and Systematic Sunday School Work by Prof. Davis. He dwelt largely on a review scheme of the present quarter. Excellent music was furnished during both sessions.

The next Sylvania convention will meet with the Evangelical school in about three months.

Following is the Sylvania Sunday school growth:

	Enrollment 1883.	Now, ent.	Gain per cent.
Population	1,421	1,476	4
Sunday schools:
Sylvania M. E. 78
Sylvania Congregational 74	100*	120	20
Mitcham M. E.	15	35	133 1-3
Evangelical	40	35	12 1-2
Ginger Hill		60
	155	250	61

*Schools met at different hours and the total enrollment only had 100 different persons, some attending both schools. There is no Congregational school held now.

The county executive committee of the association will meet at the Sunday school bureau next Saturday afternoon to make arrangements for the county convention to be held at Whitehouse.

WAKE UP.

If you wake up in the morning with a bitter or bad taste in your mouth, Languor, Dull Headache, Despondency, Constipation, take Simmons Liver Regulator. It corrects the bilious stomach, sweetens the breath and cleanses the furred tongue. Children as well as adults sometimes eat something that does not digest well, producing Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Restlessness, or Sleeplessness—a good dose of Regulator will give relief. So perfectly harmless is this remedy that it can be taken by the youngest infant or the most delicate person without injury, no matter what the condition of the system may be. It can do no harm if it does no good, but its reputation for 40 years proves it never fails in doing good.

HOME-SICKNESS.

If I should leave my home, and go away
To pass a year and day
'Mid other scenes, should I not early find
That I had left behind
A portion of my life's felicity
Which could not follow me?
And if, when the allotted time had passed,
I turned my steps at last
To enter at the old familiar door
Of kindly home once more,
Might I not learn that what my heart had sought,
With back-recurring thought,
Was missing still—in home's securest spot—
And I could find it not?
Might I not vainly wander to and fro,
Seeking again to know
That fond completeness of felicity,
Which could not follow me?
Ah, yes!—and if a longing soul in heaven
Free passport might be given
To come again, and tread earth's weary soil
With feet unused to toil—
To leave the converse of eternity
And linger lovingly
O'er earth's poor haunts, the playgrounds of those years
Whose smiles were dimmed with tears,
So would it find that nothing here below
Was what it used to know—
That all the peace which memory had cast
Around the cherished past,
All the familiar, kindly home-delight
Had vanished from it quite;
Soon would it spread its wings with sigh of pain—
Too thankful to retain
The power of entering heaven's open door,
And leaving nevermore.
Let us not weep, then, though we lose the light
That made this earth so bright—
Though all the single sunbeams, one by one,
Be gathered to the sun;
Assured that there, in fullness rich and free,
They will restored be,
And Home, the dearest name that we can know
On weary earth below,
Shall be a mother wholly reconciled
To each despondling child.
—The Corah'll.

BROUGHT HIM TO TIME.

A gentleman who was traveling through the Possum Ridge country, down in Missouri, recently came suddenly upon a tall, lank, weather-bronzed woman of middle age, who stood in a little clump of bushes by the roadside holding a long barreled rifle in her hand. She was a grim, hard-featured, determined-looking creature, clad in the true backwoods style, with a dress of homemade linsey that lacked a few inches of reaching to the tops of the foxy plow shoes she wore, and an old-fashioned split bonnet that had broken down and flapped over her eyes, half hiding her thin, sharp face.

"Mornin', mister," she saluted as the stranger rode up.

"Good mornin, ma'am," the gentleman replied.

"Hev you'uns kem much fur this mawnin'?"

"No; just from Beckett's mill."

"Did you'uns stop down thar las' night?"

"At the mill?"

"Yas, at the mill, o' co'se. That's the place we wus talkin' 'bout, haint it?"

"Yes, I stopped there."

"Wuz anybody thar 'sides what natrally belongs thar?"

"Yes, there were several men there last night."

"You'uns d'dn't know none of 'em, I reckon?"

"No, ma'am."

"Then you'uns don't know whar Pete Jackson wuz thar or not?"

"No, I do not."

"D'dn't hear nobody called by thet name, I reckon?"

"No. There was a man there, though, whom they called Pete. It is possible that he was Mr. Jackson."

"I 'low hit air possible, stranger; though ef hit war Pete Jackson, you haint no call to speak of 'im as mister. He haint worth it. Wuz that Pete you see down thar a little, frowzy, bowlegged, knock-kneed runt with one eye, an' a patch o' goose-fuz on his chin?"

"Yes, ma'am, I think that description suits him pretty well."

"Does he look like he didn't have mor'n half sense?"

"Well, perhaps he does, ma'am."

"Does he set 'round with his mouth open, a gigglin' an' a snickerin' all the time when folks is talkin'?"

"Yes, I think he does."

"Has he got one rear gnawed off an' a long tusk on each side o' his mouth?"

"Yes ma'am he has."

"Then it war Pete Jackson, the low-lifed, sneakin' onery houn'. Thinks he's a-playin' it monstrous fine, I reckon; but I 'low he's gwine to be powerful fooled fust thing he knows. The dirty little pup!"

"What has Pete been doing?" the stranger asked.

"Been twin' to act smart. Didn't you hear him blowin' none over there 'bout he'd fooled nobody?"

"Why, I believe he was saying something about playing a joke on some one."

"It wuz on a woman, wan't it?"

"Yes, I think so."

"What wuz he sayin' 'bout her, stranger?"

"I hardly know, ma'am, for I wasn't giving much attention. I think, though he had agreed to marry the woman, and on the strength of it had got $10 from her to pay the minister and get a license, as she supposed."

"An' he wa'n't going to git no license, ner preacher, ner nothin' wuz he?"

"I rather think not."

"Wuz he corryin' on 'bout how slick he'd fooled the woman?"

"Yes, he was."

"Wuz he spoutin' 'bout how she looked?"

"Yes, he said she was as ugly as sin and as green as grass, and that he couldn't n't be hired, coaxed or forced to marry her."

"He said them things, did he?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"The measly, onery, sneakin' pup. Come a lyin' to me and got my money an' then goes off a-braggin' an' a-blowin' 'bout foolin' of me."

"What! are you the lady he fooled?"

"I'm the one he thinks he's fooled, stranger; but afore I get done with the little runt he'll find out he ain't fooled me much. He's played that caper on' bout a dozen women fust and last, but he ain't gwine to play hit no more. I'm a-layin' fer him now, an' arter 'while when he comes wobblin' up the road yere he's gwine to git his foot in it. Fer once he'll find he's gone an' tuck the wrong sow by the laig, shore."

"Are you going to shoot him?"

"No, co'se not. I wouldn't waste a load o'powder on him. He ain't wuth it."

"What do you propose to do then?"

"Jest gwine to lay low yere tell he comes 'long; then I'm gwine to up an' march the little cuss over to 'Squire Beeson's an' git married to him. I'll larn him how to come a-lyin' to me, an' gittin' my $10, an' then gwine off to blow 'bout it."

The stranger rode away and a few hours later returned by the same route. Almost in the same place he had met the woman in the morning he met her again. She was walking along with the rifle on her shoulder, while a few paces in advance of her was Pete Jackson trotting along as meekly and submissively as a lamb.

"I fetched the derned, onery little scrub, mister," the woman said, "an' I 'low he won't do no more blowin' 'bout his smart capers. He'd best not come a-lyin' an' a-foolin' 'round me of he don't want to git his foot in it."—Thomas P. Montfort, in Detroit Free Press.

IN THE PARIS GEM MARKET.

Connoisseurs Whose Memory for Jewels Almost Presses Belief.

On the second floor of a cafe in the Boulevard Montmartre, in Paris, the market or bourse of precious stones is held, always in broad daylight. Very few strangers to the trade can penetrate this sanctuary, not because the access to it is difficult, for the door is always open, but because the portfolios close and the stars disappear the moment an unknown face appears at the threshold. Instead of animated traders the stranger finds only a few men carelessly playing a game of bezique. Ah, but there is a Turk who looks so much like Coudere of the Opera Comique, except that he is yellow and wears very loose trousers. But these trousers are full of diamonds. Don't believe for a moment that these dealers in precious stones are afraid of robbers. That is the smallest thing that bothers them. What they dread is to let the small jewelers know the real value of their goods.

As soon as the stranger departs the arms stretch out and the portfolios reappear. The greater number of these portfolios are made of tin and are closed with a lock and key. In a moment the tables are covered with little bundles of white paper formed like those in which the druggists put rhubarb or sulphate of magnesia. These packages are opened, and in less time than it takes to tell it the tables, including the billiard table, are covered with precious stones which might startle the shah of Persia. A strange spectacle is presented by those sordid old men quietly taking from their pockets many thousand dollars' worth of gems. Each one of perhaps 10,000 packages contains a large number of brilliants. After they are disposed of the rare stones are introduced. Here, then, are sapphires as big as nuts. There lies a black diamond almost as large as the twelve pearls that surround it. Here, again, is a necklace made of fifteen emeralds that would make as many snuff boxes.

"Here is a rare bargain," shouts one of the merchants, "one of the finest pieces of ancient jewelry known! It is a necklace that belonged to Madame la Princesse Guemenee. Mounting, diamonds and all are ancient. Prince Proiselolloff refused 75,000 frs. for it 20 years ago." The necklace is passed from hand to hand. The merchants gaze at it with attention. The eye glasses come into play. Indecision and doubt are painted upon some faces. At last the necklace is passed to Michel. He is the great judge. He takes it, weighs it in his hand, looks at it with an indifferent air, and says:

"The two brilliants are ancient. They come, with their mounting, from the Countess de Prejean. The two others, still finer, once formed part of a necklace which was stolen in Venice in 1804 from Mme. Morosini. This necklace belonged later to Lady Temple, whose husband purchased it at Candahar of Isaac Lieven. Lady Temple gave it to her daughter, who sold it three days after her marriage. As for the sapphire in the center, that comes from the sale of Mlle. Schneider. The rest is new and comes direct from Hamburg. But, after all, it is well preserved, and 75,000 frs. does not seem to be too much for it."

As extraordinary as it may appear, there are now living five or six individuals who know most of the costly diamonds and rich jewels in the world, and they are able to recognize them after a lapse of 30 years, even when they had first seen them only a moment, as certainly as a tailor would recognize at 30 paces the customer who forgot to pay him. When a burglary is committed in the house of a well-known jeweler, which often happens in Paris, London, Vienna, and St. Petersburg, if there is among the objects stolen a stone of more than ordinary value it is almost sure to be found and returned to the owner.

LOVE BUT A DISEASE.

"What is love?" Such was the conundrum over which half a dozen young knights of the grip pored in vain in the Lindell corridors Sunday afternoon. It was finally decided to inquire of the oracle in matters amatory, Major Henry Ryder. "Love, eh? What is it? I guess it must be electricity. Whenever we cannot understand exactly what a thing is we class it with electrical phenomena. As we do not know what electricity is, such a definition is about as satisfactory as saying that water is wet. At the banquet of Plato a number of distinguished Greeks talked very learnedly about the tender passion, but they do not appear to know much more about it than the green gosling who is suffering with his first attack. I say first attack, for it is becoming quite fashionable nowadays to experience the delightful sensation several times.

But perhaps we are not more fickle than were our ancestors, for the New Testament speaks of a woman who planted seven husbands, and Shakespeare makes Romeo change his sweethearts with almost as much facility as he would his shirt. But, really, I think that the love that flits from flower to flower must be the attendant of Venus Pandemos.

"It is of the earth, earthy. It is the love that causes the widow to smile through her tears; that makes the funeral baked meats furnish forth the marriage feast. Lightning may strike twice in the same place and the Uranian Venus may rear a second altar amid the ashes of a desolated shrine—I don't know; but I am not banking on it. Many people imagine themselves in love when they are only troubled with indigestion or a disordered liver, apply for a marriage license when what they need is a full-grown bucksaw or a 44-calibre wash tub. No, young gentlemen, I cannot tell you what love is. I used to believe it the power that made the world go round—an emanation from heaven—a portion of that bright essence increate infused into the human heart; but, after watching its vagaries for half a century, I am inclined to believe it a disease of the blood, the mad work of some yet undiscovered microbe, which therapeutics may yet provide a panacea for."

WONDERFUL SPIDERS OF LA PLATA.

In a chapter on spiders mention is made in Science of the many strange and wonderful features known in connection with them. Some spin a wonderfully complex and beautiful web; some live on or in the ground; many simulate inanimate objects or death itself. Of two species belonging to the same genus, one is green, while another is like a withered or dead-up leaf. The first, when disturbed, falls rapidly to the ground like a fresh green leaf broken from a twig, but the second falls slowly, like a very light, dried, and withered leaf. Some of the spiders are very large, and will chase a man from thirty to forty yards, keeping pace with a slow trotting horse. An instance is related where one ran up the lash of the author's riding whip to within three or four inches of his hand, and would have bitten him had he not thrown the whip away.

SHIFTLESS SORT OF LIGHTNING.

During a recent severe rainstorm, lightning struck the barn of John Speece, near Whiteland, Ind., "and although the boards on the four corners were loosened, and a wide swath was cut through the hay mow, neither contents nor building took fire. Two horses were in the barn and the halter strap of one was cut in two, but the animal was not even stunned."

Young ladies of Germany have a superstition that if they bury a drop of their blood under a rosebush it will ever after insure the experimenter a pair of rosy cheeks.

The largest number of men enlisted from 13 states of America during the revolutionary war was 80,761 in 1776. The aggregate of troops furnished the union army in the war of 1861-65 was 2,320,272.

A New London (Conn.) maiden ate nine plates of ice cream, one right after the other, the other day. She topped off the feast with several peaches and pears and a large bunch of grapes. She will probably live.

The old penalty against a German soldier or sailor of the standing army or navy who left the fatherland was a fine of 200 marks or 48 days' imprisonment. That has now been raised to 1,000 marks' fine or imprisonment for four months.

House purchasers will be pained to learn that the diminishing supply of white oak is leading to the substitution of the cheaper red oak. Car builders report that it bends well and is valuable for door stiles, rails and some other parts of the interior of cars.

Handling short lobsters is a risky business in Maine. Recently the warden seized from two expressmen 12 barrels containing 1,924 short lobsters, and the culprits were fined $1,924 each. The lobsters were dumped overboard and may now attain a decent size.

A man 100 years old has just been committed to prison for three months in Russia for petit theft. It was his first offense. There are 15 national banks in New York city which have deposits exceeding $15,000,000 each, the largest amount being $33,000,000, in the National Park.

The bugle horn was once called the buffalo horn, and it apparently derives its name from the bugle, or extinct auroch, the wild ox of Great Britain. In the Isle of Wight the bull's head on inn signs is often accompanied by the word bugle, and the French term for the lowing of cattle is still beugler.

One of the crimes, to speak in the parlance of bibliophiles, for which the redoubtable Mr. Millbank will have to answer, is that in order to get ready money he sacrificed the splendid library bequeathed him by his father. But it is admittedly better to sacrifice fine books for cash than a woman's reputation.

Corals of some kind are found in all seas. Those stony formations popularly called corals are mostly produced within the tropics. Probably the variety best known is the red or pink coral, long esteemed for ornaments. This was found in the Mediterranean from a very early period. Now, however, it has become so rare as to be practically extinct.

M. Adam Paulson, of the Royal Danish academy, has been conducting a series of experiments to measure the hights of the aurora boreal's. At Godthaab the approximate hight was from one to four miles, at Cape Farewell from one to ten miles, at Spitzenburg from one-third of a mile to 18 miles. The measurements were made with theodolites.

Mamaroneck, N. Y., was, on a recent day, in the position of a town without any government authority or constituted official. Its justice of the peace, members of the town board, clerk of the health board, members of the board of education, captain of the fire patrol, and secretary of the fire department had gone away pleasuring, and had appointed no substitutes.

The Maine fishermen spread a table on board their vessels that would surprise the average person. Barrels of cabbage, turnips, sweet corn, fish, meats, canned goods, etc., are included in the outfit. In fact, all the articles necessary for a first-class hotel are found in the pantry. Though they handle immense quantities of fish, neither on board nor at their homes does it often appear.

Mr. Townsend, of Apacortes, Wash., who had a halibut line anchored out in Guemes channel, went to raise his line and found, to his surprise, that instead of a halibut he had caught a shark. It appears that a dog-fish had swallowed the bait and hook, and the shark in turn swallowed the dog-fish. The shark measured seven and a half feet long and weighed about one hundred and fifty pounds. In appearance it was very much like the man-eating species, but was pronounced by some to be of the species known as the "mud-shark."

A novel spectacle was lately witnessed at a Mediterranean port, when a steamer was stoked with bank notes. Forty-five sacks of the apparently valuable paper were tossed into the furnace of the vessel's boilers, under the longing eyes of the stokers, who stood restively by with an evidently burning desire to possess themselves of at least a handful of that which they inelegantly termed "rum fuel." The notes were canceled documents of the Bank of Algiers, whose manager superintended the operation of their combustion.

A traveler describes a strange formation in Mitchell county, Texas. "At the junction of two creeks," he writes, "is a bed of friable gray sandstone mixed with coarse gravel. Water passing over the ledge has worn away a part of it, and has created a fall of thirty feet. The loose gravel carried round and round in the eddies has gradually bored holes in the sandstone. These holes are from three to six feet wide, and from fifty to one hundred feet deep. There are from fifteen to twenty of them, all filled with fresh water. By the long-continued churning of the gravel they have been made jug-shaped or cistern-like."

One of the prettiest microscopical studies is the examination of the lungs of a plant. Its lungs are in its leaves. Examined through a high-power microscope, every leaf will show thousands upon thousands of openings, infinitely small, of course, but each provided with lips, which, in many species, are continually opening and closing. These openings lead to tiny cavities in the body of the leaf, and by the opening and closing of the cavity air is continually passing in and out, so that the act of respiration is constantly going on. The sap of the plant is thus purified, just as the blood of an animal is cleared of impurities by passing through the lungs and an averaged sized tree will therefore in the course of a day do as much breathing as a man.

TESTING DIAMONDS.

Inexperienced People May Tell the Real From the Imitation Gem.

Ample testimony has recently appeared in scientific papers confirmatory of the fact that the hardness of diamonds is not perceptibly reduced by cutting and polishing. One correspondent of the San Francisco Call states that in his early experience he was accustomed to select a gem with smoothly glazed surface, and after the stone was split in a cleavage plane inclined at a rather sharp angle to the natural face selected, this split face being ground and polished. In this way he was able to obtain at several points short knife edges, which gave superb results in ruling.

It was soon found, however, that after ruling several thousand rather heavy lines the diamond was liable to lose its sharp cutting edge, and the experience became so frequent that he was compelled to resort to the method now employed, that of grinding and polishing both faces to a knife edge. He has one ruling diamond prepared in this way which has been in constant use for four years, and its capacity for good work has not yet been reduced in the slightest degree.

G. F. Kunz, who took part in the discussion on this subject, mentioned incidentally that there is no difficulty in even the most inexperienced person distinguishing the real from the imitation diamond. If the stone scratches sapphire it is without doubt a diamond, whereas putting the gem into a flame would not differentiate the diamond from the white topaz, or the white zircon, or the white sapphire, or the white tourmaline, or any other white stone that is not fusible. But the absolute and most simple test for diamonds is to draw the stone sharply over a piece of unpainted board in a dark room. Every diamond phosphoresces by friction.

A LONG-NEGLECTED GRAVE.

That lonely speck in Bering sea where Commander Bering, of the Russian navy, the first efficient explorer of those waters, lies buried beneath a rude cairn, will presently have a monument to the navigator's memory. The Russian man of war Alcoot recently visited the spot and will return with a metal cross inscribed to the memory of Bering and his followers and proclaimed as the tribute of the island in 1741.

TALMAGE IS HOME.

His Sunday Sermon in Brooklyn.

A Vast Congregation Greets the Famous Preacher on His Return.

Brooklyn, Sept. 26.—Dr. Talmage was greeted with a most generous and effusive welcome Sunday by a vast congregation which assembled to hear him preach his first sermon after his return from his European preaching tour. He announced that in a Sunday or two he would give a sermon concerning his stewardship in delivering in Russia, in behalf of the Christian Herald, the $35,000 worth of flour for the starving. The subject to-day was "All in All." Text, Colossians v, 11: "Christ is all in all."

Returned after the most eventful summer of my life, I must shortly, and as soon as I recover from the sea voyage, give you an account of our mission of bread to famine-struck Russia, and of my preaching tour through Germany, England, Scotland and Ireland; but my first sermon on reaching here must be a hosanna of gratitude to Christ, and from the text I have chosen I have found that the greatest name in the ocean-shipping, and from Liverpool to Moscow, and from Moscow to London, and Edinburg and Belfast and Dublin, is Jesus.

Every age of the world has had its historians, its philosophers, its artists, its thinkers, and its teachers. Were there histories to be written, there has always been a Moses, or a Herodotus, or a Xenophon, or a Josephus to write them. Were there poems to be constructed, there has always been a Job or a Homer to construct them. Were there thrones, lustrous and powerful, to be lifted, there has always been a David or Caesar to raise them. Were there teachers demanded for the intellect and the hearts, there has been a Socrates, and a Zeno, and a Cleanthes, and a Marcus Antonius coming forth on the grand glorious mission. Every age of the world has had its triumph of reason and morality. There has not been a single age of the world which has not had some decided system of religion. The Platonism, Orientalism, Stoicism, Brahminism, and Buddhism, considering the ages in which they were established, were not lacking in ingenuity and force. Now, in this line of beneficial institutions and of noble men, there appeared a personage more wonderful than any predecessor. He came from a family without any royal or aristocratic pretension. He had no advantage from the schools. There were people beside him day after day who had no idea that he was going to be anything remarkable or do anything remarkable. Yet, notwithstanding all this, and without any title, or scholarly profession, or flaming rhetoric, he startled the world with the strangest announcements, ran in collision with solemn priest and proud ruler, and with a voice that rang through temple and palace, and over ship's deck, and mountain's top, exclaimed "I am the light of the world!" Men were taken all aback at the idea that that hand, yet hard from the use of the ax, the adze, the hatchet, should wave the sceptre of authority and that upon that brow, from which they had so often seen him wipe the sweat of toil, there would yet come the crown of unparalleled splendor and of universal dominion. We all know how difficult it is to think that anybody who was at school with us in boyhood has got to be anything great or famous; and no wonder that those who had been boys with Christ in the streets of Nazareth and seen him in after years in the days of his complete obscurity, should have been very slow to acknowledge Christ's wonderful mission.

From this humble point the stream of life flowed out. At first it was just a faint rill, hardly able to find its way down the rock, but the tears of a weeping Christ added to its volume; and it flowed on until, by the beauty and greenness of its banks, you might know the path the crystal stream was taking. On and on until the lepers were brought down and washed off their leprosy, and the dead were lifted into the water that they might have life, and pearls of joy and promise were gathered from the brink, and innumerable churches on either bank, and the tide flows on deeper, and stronger, and wider, until it rolls into the river from under the throne of God, mingling billow with billow, and brightness with brightness, and joy with joy, and hosanna with hosanna!

I was looking at some of the paintings of the artist, Mr. Kensett. I saw some pictures that were just faint outlines; in some places you would see only the branches of a tree and no trunk; and in another case the trunk and no branches. He had not finished the work. It would have taken him days and months, perhaps, to have completed it. Well, my friend, in this world we get only the faintest outline of what Christ is. It will take all eternity to fill up the picture—so loving, so kind, so merciful, so great! Paul does not, in this chapter, say of Christ he is good, or he is loving, or he is patient, or he is kind; but in his exclamation of the text he embraces everything when he says, "Christ is all in all."

I remark, in the first place, Christ is everything in the Bible. I do not care where I open the Bible, I find Jesus. In whatever path I start, I come, after a while, to the Bethlehem manger. I go back to the old dispensation, and I see a lamb on the altar, and say, "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world!" Then I go and see the manna provided for the Israelites in the wilderness, and say, "Jesus, the bread of life." Then I look at the rock which was smitten by the prophet's rod, and, as the water gushes out, I say, "It is Jesus, the fountain opened for sin and uncleanliness." I go back and look at the writings of Job, and hear him exclaim, "I know that my Redeemer liveth." Then I go to Ezekiel, and I find Christ presented there as "a plant of renown," and then I turn over to Isaiah, and Christ is spoken of "as a sheep before her shearers." It is Jesus all the way between Genesis and Malachi. Then I turn over to the New Testament, and it is Christ in the parable, it is Christ in the miracle, it is Christ in the evangelist's story, it is Christ in the Apostles' epistles, and it is Christ in the trumpet peal of the Apocalypse. I know there are a great many people who do not find Christ in the Bible. Here is a man who studies the Bible as a historian. Well, if you come as a historian you will find in this book how the world was made, how the seas fled to their places, how empires were established, how nation fought with nation, javelin ringing against harbegeon, until the earth was ghastly with the dead. You will see the coronation of princes, the triumph of conquerors, and the world turned upside down and back again and down again, cleft and scarred with great agonies of earthquake, and tempest, and battle. It is a wonderful history, putting to the blush all others in the accuracy of its recital, and in the stupendous events it records. Homer, and Thucydides, and Gibbon could make great stories out of little events; but it took a Moses to tell how the heavens and the earth were made in one chapter, and to give the history of thousands of years upon two leaves.

There are others who come to the Bible merely as antiquarians. If you come as an antiquarian you will find a great many odd things in the Bible: peculiarities of manner and custom, marriage and burial; peculiarities of dress, tunics, sandals, erisping-pins, amulets and girdles, and tinkling ornaments. If you come to look at military arrangements you will find coats of mail, and javelins and engines of war and circumvallation, and encampments. If you look for peculiar musical instruments you will find psalteries, and shicionoths, and rams' horns. The antiquarian will find in the Bible curiosities in agriculture, and in commerce, and in art, and in religion, that will keep him absorbed a great while. There are those who come to this Bible as you would to a cabinet of curiosities, and pick up this and say, "What a strange sword that is!" and "What a peculiar hat this is!" and the Bible to such becomes a British museum.

Then there are others who find nothing in the Bible but the poetry. Well, if you come as a poet, you will find in this book faultless rythm, and bold imagery, and startling antithesis, and rapturous lyric, and sweet pastoral, and instructive narrative, and devotional psalm; thoughts expressed in a style more solemn than that of Montgomery, more bold than that of Milton, more terrible than that of Dante, more natural than that of Wordsworth, more impassioned than that of Pollock, more tender than that of Cowper, more weird than that of Spenser. This great poem brings all the gems of the earth into its coronet, and it weaves the flames of judgment in its garland, and pours eternal harmonies in its rhythm. Everything this book touches it makes beautiful, from the plain stones of the summer threshing floor, and the daughters of Nahor filling the trough for the camels, and the fish pools of Heshbon, up to the Psalmist praising God with diapason of storm and whirlwind, and Job leading forth Orion, Arcturus, and the Pleiades. It is a wonderful poem, and a great many people read it as they do Thomas Moore's "Lalla Rookh," and Walter Scott's "Lady of the Lake," and Tennyson's "Charge of the Light Brigade." They sit down, and are so absorbed in looking at the shells on the shore that they forget to look off on the great ocean of God's mercy and salvation.

Then there are others who come to this book as skeptics. They marshal passage against passage, and try to get Matthew and Luke in a quarrel, and would have a discrepancy between what Paul and James say about faith and works; and they try the account of Moses concerning the creation by modern decisions in science and resolve that in all questions between the scientific explorer and the inspired writer they will give the preference to the geologist. These men—these spiders, I will say—suck poison out of the sweetest flowers. They fatten their infidelity upon the truths which have led thousands to heaven, and in their distorted vision, prophet seems to war with prophet and evangelist with evangelist, and apostle with apostle; and if they can find some bad trait of character in a man of God mentioned in the Bible, these carrion crows caw and flap their wings over the carcass. Because they cannot understand how the whale swallowed Jonah, they attempt the more wonderful feat of swallowing the monster whale of modern skepticism. They do not believe it possible that the Bible story should be true which says that the dumb ass spake, while they themselves prove the thing possible by their own utterances. I am amused beyond bounds when I hear one of these men talking about a future life. Just ask a man who rejects that Bible what heaven is, and hear him befog your soul. He will tell you that heaven is merely the development of the internal resources of man; it is an efflorescence of the dynamitic forces into a state of ethereal and transcendental lucubration, in close juxtaposition to the ever present "was" and in the great "to be," and the everlasting "No." Considering themselves wise, they are fools for time, fools for eternity.

Then there is another class of persons who are to the Bible as controversialists. They are enormous Presbyterians, or fierce Baptists, or violent Methodists. They cut the Bible to suit their creed, instead of cutting their creed to suit the Bible. If the Scriptures think as they do, well; if not, so much the worse for the Scriptures. The Bible is merely the whetstone on which they sharpen the dissecting knife of controversy. They come to it as a government in time of war comes to the armories or arsenals for weapons and munitions. They have declared everlasting war against all other sects, and they want so many broadswords, so many muskets, so many howitzers, so many columbiads, so much grape and canister, so many field pieces with which to rake the field of dispute; for they mean to get the victory, though the heavens be darkened with the smoke and the earth rent with the thunder. What do they care about the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ? I have seen some such men come back from an ecclesiastical massacre as proud of their achievements as an Indian warrior boasting of the number of scalps he has taken. I have more admiration for a man who goes forth with his fists to get the championship than I have for these theological pugilists who make our theological magazines ring with their war cry. There are men who seem to think the only use of the sword is to stick somebody. There is one passage of the Scriptures that they like better than all others, and that is this: "Blessed be the Lord which teacheth my hands to war and my fingers to fight." Woe to us if we come to God's word as controversialists, or skeptics, or as connoisseurs, or as fault finders, or merely as poets!

Those only get into the heart of God's truth who come seeking Christ. Welcome all such! They will find him coming out from behind the curtain of prophecy, until he stands, in the full light of New Testament disclosures, Jesus, the Son of God, the Saviour of the world. They will find him in genealogical table and in chronological calculation, in poetic stanza and in historical narrative, in profound parable and in startling miracle. They will see his foot on every sea, and his tears in the drops of dew on Hermon, and hear his voice in the wind, and behold his words all abloom in the valley between Mount Olivet and Jerusalem. There are some men who come and walk around the Temple of Truth and merely see the outside. There are others who walk into the porch and then come away. There are others who come in and look at the pictures, but they know nothing about the chief attractions of the Bible. It is only the man who comes and knocks at the gate, saying, "I would see Jesus." For him the glories of that book open, and he goes in and finds Christ, and with him peace, pardon, life, comfort, and heaven. "All in all is Jesus" in the Bible.

SAM'L OF POSEN.

His Trial Called Again in the West.

A Man Has Been Found Who Will Swear Against the Actor.

San Francisco, Sept. 26.—The case of M. B. Curtis, the actor, better known throughout the country as Sam'l of Posen, and who is charged with the murder of Alexander Grant, a policeman, on the night of September 11, of last year, is again on the docket for trial in the criminal court to-day.

The life of the actor has once before been placed in jeopardy, and the jury on the previous trial came within an ace of convicting him of murder in the first degree, the vote standing eleven to one.

At that time there was a weak point in the evidence of the prosecution owing to the fact that none of the witnesses would positively swear that it was Curtis who fired the fatal shot.

It is now claimed, however, that an important witness has been secured in the person of one J. W. Cann, a man 70 years of age and living in the interior of the state.

It is said that Cann saw the scuffle between Curtis and the officers from the opposite side of the street, and that he saw the accused shoot the policeman twice in succession, but that he did not inform the police owing to the fact that he had purchased his ticket for the next morning's boat and did not desire to be detained in the city.

WOMEN AS DRUMMERS.

They Go Out on the Road and Many Are Fairly Successful.

It has come to pass that women now dispute the possession of the field with man as a drummer. Women travel for everything and sell everything. They are found mostly in small businesses, where the orders for goods are confined to a few dollars, but occasionally there is one who vies with her flossy brothers and takes orders for thousands of dollars.

One of the most successful of these female drummers who has visited Denver and who travels extensively over the west, is Miss Green, who represents the Mound City Paint Co., says the Denver Sun. She is a large, masculine woman, and she seldom enters a drug, paint, or hardware store without effecting a sale. She can show orders for the past few years aggregating $200,000 worth of paint.

There is one familiar drummer in all the western cities, who is at the St. James. She sells satin advertising banners, which are printed with the rules and hung upon the door of every room in the hotel. You have noticed them with their little bangle fringe. She is the most voluble talker and usually gains her point.

There is another and very handsome young lady who travels for a lace factory. She sells to all of the wholesalers, and is a good authority on the subject. She knows more about laces than most of her male competitors.

One lady who has been registered in a Denver hotel sells draperies, and she is a most artistic draper, selling often large bills. She handles only the smaller stores.

Another travels with dress straps, which she claims are unbreakable.

A very petite young blonde who carries the odor of roses about her sells perfumes for one of the prominent Chicago houses. She has a delicacy of smell which enables her to tell at a sniff the component parts of any perfume shown her. She is also very successful.

There is a certain brand of perfumed cigarettes which is not as yet in general use in Denver. They are extremely narcotic and are sold in eastern cities to Turkish bath rooms, and may be purchased of any French store where women's toilet articles are sold. A very chic young French woman is coining money out of this, and, as she is a hustler, the cigarettes are being sown broadcast all over the country.

Women sell toilet articles, health waists and braces, hose supporters, patent articles of every description, milliners' trimmings, buttons and everything imaginable. The number is growing largely every year, and a woman now may travel with as much freedom as a man.

THE INSURANCE AGENT.

He Shirks a Risky Subject and Is Called Down.

It happened on circus day, in the morning, shortly after the parade. An agent for a life insurance company had busied himself with passing around his business cards during the parade, and now was looking about for a victim. He was one of those active, irrepressible fellows, who generally succeed in life and in making themselves eminently disagreeable to their fellow-citizens. Walking up to a bashful looking man who stood on the sidewalk, he handed him one of his cards, and said, pleasantly:

"Good morning. Fine morning. Could I trouble you for just a few moments? I want to show you a new system of life insurance that our company has adopted. Your life insured?"

The bashful-looking man answered in the negative, and the agent thereupon unfolded a plan of life insurance, which, as he said, was entirely new. In vain the victim protested that he wanted no life insurance; the broker would not listen. The bashful man's cheeks were slowly reddening; he was growing irritated. Suddenly he exclaimed: "All right, put me down for $2,000."

A smile of satisfaction illuminated the face of the broker as he drew an application blank from his pocket, and, pencil in hand, began:

"Name?"

"John Birdeye."

"Age?"

"Thirty-six."

"Occupation? That is, what do you do for a living?"

"I am the lion-tamer with Barnum's circus."

The broker's eyes opened wide; for a moment he stared vacantly at the man, and then, as the truth slowly dawned upon him, with a mighty effort he recovered his composure and muttered: "Well, I'll be hanged. That's one on me. Let's have a drink."—St. Paul Globe.

In speaking of the future of the telephone, Prof. Alexander Graham Bell says: "The telephone, as at present constructed, needs the open air to obtain the best results. To use wires placed underground, a metallic circuit will be necessary, similar to the one used now on long distance lines. To place the wires under ground and to make a metallic circuit, which means to use two wires where one is used at present, will materially increase the expenses of the company, and the public must pay for the luxury. As the number of wires is increasing rapidly, it is evident that they must ere long be buried."

THE TRUE LAXATIVE PRINCIPLE

Of the plants used in manufacturing the pleasant remedy, Syrup of Figs, has a permanently beneficial effect on the human system, while the cheap vegetable extracts and mineral solutions, usually sold as medicines, are permanently injurious. Being well-informed, you will use the true remedy only. Manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

The deadliest enemy the spider has is the wasp. No spider has any chance at all in battle with a wasp, for the latter is mailclad and bites as hard as he pleases. The spider can not penetrate the horny covering of the wasp's body, while the sharp sting of the winged fury will pierce any place in the spider's tender anatomy. Even the tarantulas of Texas and New Mexico are afraid of the big red wasp of those countries, that does not hesitate to pounce on one whenever it is seen, and after stinging it carries it off to place in the nest where the eggs have already been deposited. The bodies of the spiders are food for the young wasp, and one wasp nest has been known to contain fifty spiders.

VILLANELLE.

In every sound I think I hear her feet,
And still I weand my altered way alone,
And still I say: "To-morrow we shall meet."

I watch the shadows in the crowded street;
Each passing face I follow one by one;
In every sound I think I hear her feet.

And months go by—bleak March and May-day heat;
Harvest is over, winter well nigh done,
And still I say: "To-morrow we shall meet."

Among the city squares, when flowers are sweet,
With every breath a sigh of hers seems blown,
In every sound I think I hear her feet.

Belfry and clock the unending hours repeat,
From twelve to twelve, and still she comes in none,
And still I say: "To-morrow we shall meet."

Oh, long-delayed to-morrow! Hearts that beat
Measure the length of every minute gone;
In every sound I think I hear her feet.

Ever the suns rise tardily or fleet
And light the letters on a churchyard stone—
And still I say: "To-morrow we shall meet."

And still from out her unknown far retreat
She haunts me with her tender undertone,
In every sound I think I hear her feet,
And still I say: "To-morrow we shall meet."

Advice to Mothers of Fretful Babies

828 Huron St., Toledo, O., July 17, '92.
Hand Medicine Co., Gentlemen:

My baby is now three months old and has had colic all her life. We gave her all kinds of remedies without any beneficial effect. I was almost discouraged in trying anything else when a friend told me of your Dr. Hand's Colic Cure. I gave her 12 drops which acted like a charm. Now as soon as I discover she has wind colic I give her one or two doses which relieves her entirely. I want to advise all mothers who have fretful babies to use Dr. Hand's Colic Cure. I will hereafter always keep it in the house.

Heiskell's Ointment
Is a positive cure for all forms of
SKIN DISEASE.
We base this assertion on our observation of over thirty years, in which time a very large number and variety of Skin Diseases have been reported to us as cured, by the simple use of Heiskell's Ointment, without the aid of internal remedies. Many of these were cases of long duration, that had resisted the treatment of the most eminent medical talent in this and other countries. Heiskell's Ointment seems never to have failed in a single instance.

DR. C. G. CLARK'S BOTANIC LIVER PILLS

Contain no calomel, mandrake, croton oil, or poison; will not irritate, constipate, weaken or gripe, and act on the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidney and Blood. If you feel bad, have a sallow skin, dark spots under your eyes, have sick spells, use these, the best pills made, and get well. Having so many calls at my office for these Pills, I have concluded to put them into the drug stores. First, as East, North and West Toledo, Ironville, Auburndale, Air Line Junction, and L. N. Reed's Drug store. Try them and you will use no others. For wholesale at West & Truax, Walding, Kinzan & Marvin, and at my office, 419 Madison street, Toledo, Ohio.

THREE DAYS.

In the future Dr. Bigelow will be in his city office, 305 Summit street, Toledo, Ohio, three days each week, viz: Monday, Wednesday and Friday, every other day. On the above days you get 50 per cent off on extracting, and the benefit of Dr. Bigelow's superior skill as an extractor. City office open until 11 p. m. every evening. Dr. Miller in charge. Dr. Morgan, Operator; D. Miller, Mechanical Dentist. Phone 1234. N. B.—Dr. Bigelow is proprietor of six first-class offices and will give half his time to outside interests.

TOLD IN TRAVELING.

Since Cannes the stage has been full; and as we all knew one another we talked together.

As we passed Tarascon some one said, "Murders are done here," and we began to discuss that mysterious assassin who had never been caught, and who from time to time during the last two years has killed some traveler. Every one hazarded an opinion, every one suggested something; the women looked shivering at the sombre night behind the panes, fearing to see the head of a man show suddenly in the doorway.

And we told fearful tales of awful adventures, of meeting a madman in an express, of hours passed with suspicious-looking persons, all alone.

A physician, who passed each winter in the south, wished in his turn to tell a tale.

"I knew a woman," said he, "one of my patients, who is now dead, to whom there happened the strangest thing in the world, and also the most mysterious and the most affecting.

"She was a Russian, the Countess Marie Baranow, a very great lady of exquisite beauty.

"For several years her doctor had perceived that she was threatened with a lung trouble, and tried in vain to induce her to go to the south of France.

"Finally, last autumn, the physician gave her up as lost, and so informed her husband, who at once ordered his wife to leave for Mentone.

"She took the train alone in her carriage, her servants occupying another compartment.

"Night came on, the train rolled along at full speed. Suddenly she took the idea of counting the money which her husband had given her. She opened her little bag and emptied the shining flood of metal upon her knees. But suddenly a gust of cold air struck her in the face. She raised her head in surprise. The door had just swung open. The Countess Marie, in desperation, quickly threw a shawl over the money which was spread upon her knees and waited. After a few seconds a man appeared. He was in evening dress, hatless, wounded in the hands and panting. He shut the door again, sat down, looked at the woman with glittering eyes, then wrapped a handkerchief round his wrist, from which the blood flowed.

"The young countess was weak with fright. This man had certainly seen her counting her gold and he came to rob.

"He kept staring at her, breathless, his face convulsed, ready, no doubt, to make a spring.

"He said suddenly:

"'Have no fear, madame.'

"She answered nothing, being unable to open her mouth, hearing her heart beat and her ears hum.

"He continued:

"'I am not a criminal, madame.'

"She still said nothing, but in a nervous movement she made her knees come close together and her gold began to flow down upon the carpet as water flows from a gutter.

"The man, surprised, looked at this rivulet of metal, and suddenly he stooped to pick up the money.

"She rose in mad fright, casting all her treasure to the ground, and ran to the door to throw herself out. But he understood what she was about to do, rushed forward, caught her in his arms and forced her to sit down. 'Listen, madame, I am not a criminal, and the proof is that I am going to pick up this money and give it back to you. But I am a lost man—a dead man—unless you help me to cross the frontier. I cannot tell you more. In one hour we shall be at the last Russian station, in one hour and twenty minutes we shall pass the boundary of the empire. If you do not save me I am lost. And yet, madame, I have neither killed nor stolen nor done anything against my honor. I swear it to you. I cannot tell you more.

"And getting down on his knees he picked up the gold, looking even for the last pieces, which had rolled far under the seats. Then, when the little leather bag was once more full he returned it to his neighbor without adding a word, and again he went and sat in the other corner of the carriage.

"The train ran through the darkness, cast rending cries across the night, sometimes slackened its pace, then went on again at full speed. But suddenly it slowed, whistled several times and stopped.

"Ivan, the servant, appeared at the door to get his orders.

"The Countess Marie looked at her strange companion, then said to her servant: 'Ivan, you are to return to the count; I have no more need of you.'

"The man, speechless, opened his enormous eyes. He stammered: 'But—Barine!'

"She continued:

"'No, you are not to come; I have changed my mind. I desire that you remain in Russia. Here is the money to return. Give me your cap and your cloak.'

"The old servant, quite bewildered, bared his head and held out his cloak. He always obeyed without replying, being well accustomed to the sudden wishes and the irresistible caprices of his masters. And he withdrew, the tears in his eyes.

"The train went on, running towards the frontier.

"Then the Countess Marie said to her companion.

"'These things are for you, Monsieur; you are Ivan, my servant. I add only one condition to what I do; it is that you shall never speak to me; that you shall not address me a single word, either to thank me or for any purpose whatever.'

"The unknown bowed without uttering a word.

"Very soon they came to a stop once more, the officials in uniform visited the train. The Countess offered them her papers, and pointing to a man seated at the back of the carriage, 'My servant, Ivan. Here is his passport.'

The doctor was silent a second, then resumed: "One day as I was receiving my patients in my office, I saw enter a tall young fellow, who said to me:

"'Doctor, I come to ask news about the Countess Marie Baranow. I am, although she does not know me, a friend of her husband.'

"I replied:

"'She is doomed. She will never go back to Russia.'

"And the man suddenly commenced to sob, then he got up and went out, reeling like a drunkard.

"The same night I told the Countess that a stranger had come to inquire from me about her health. She seemed moved and told me all the story which I have just told you. She added:

"'That man whom I do not know at all, now follows me like my shadow. I meet him everytime I go out; he looks at me after a strange fashion, but he has never spoken.

"'See, I would wager he is under my windows.'

"She left her easy chair, went to pull back the curtains, and, sure enough, she showed me the man who had come to see me now seated there on a bench upon the promenade. He perceived us, rose and went off without once turning his head.

"And from that time eforward I assisted at a surprising and sorrowful thing—at the silent love of these two beings, who did not even know one another.

"He loved her with the affection of an animal who had been saved, and who is grateful and devoted unto death.

"He was certainly a kind of Don Quixote, because he made no attempt to approach her. He meant to keep to the end the absurd promise of never speaking, which he made her in the railway carriage.

"She died one day about 10 o'clock. As I was leaving the hotel he came up to me with a distracted face; he had already heard the news.

"'I should like to see her, for one second, in your presence,' said he.

"I took him by the arm and went back into the house.

"When he was before the couch of the dead he seized her hand and kissed it with an endless kiss, then escaped like a madman."

The doctor was again silent; then continued:

"This is certainly the strangest railway adventure that I know. It must also be said that men take sometimes the wildest freaks."

A woman murmured, half-aloud:

"Those two people were not so crazy as you think. They were—they were"—

But she could not speak further, she was crying so. As we changed the conversation to calm her, we never knew what she had wished to say.

There is an ancient superstition that the milk of red cows is much better than that given by cows of any other color. A Frenchman traveling through Great Britain early in the eighteenth century, noted that cows were oftener black than red in England, and that on this account the milk of the red cows was preferred to those of the black cows. He added that the contrary was true of France. References to the virtue of the red cow occur at various points in English literature, and among the sacrifices enjoyed for purification from sin in the Hebrew scriptures is a red heifer.

TALE OF A SHARK.

True Narrative Related by "Cap'n Jim" Wright of the Mary Jane.

It was Captain James Wright who told the story, and when he had finished his auditors got up and faded away in the dim twilight. Captain Wright, or "Cap'n Jim," as he is better known, sails from Maine; but, with his schooner, the Mary Jane, he had been running pineapples from the West Indies to this city. He was entertaining some friends in his room at one of the downtown hotels, and a New York Mail and Express reporter was among them.

"I have told you some of my experiences, but I don't think I related what happened to a shark a little way from Port Antonio, Jamaica, two trips ago. It was in the latter part of May, and you know the West Indian sun is not only warm but hot enough to draw the tar out of the decks and make the oakum show. We were perhaps 100 miles southeast of the point and there was a dead calm on.

"We had been running before a squall which had developed into a gale, and had been driven away out of our course. The men were idling about the deck and all were trying to keep cool. My only passenger and myself were on the poop drinking some gin and water with a little lime juice in it and enjoying the loaf as only me can who can do nothing else. The passenger had the glass, and he was sweeping the water behind us, looking for anything that might turn up. After looking in one direction several minutes he said: 'There's a sea serpent or something just off the port quarter, and he's raising a row.'

"Sure enough there was a commotion in the water and now and then a big head would raise up and flop back again with a splash. As the thing was headed for us we were naturally a trifle excited and waited anxiously for the end. It came in a few minutes, and instead of being a sea serpent it was a big shark, and he was evidently in trouble. His head appeared to be twice the size of an ordinary varmint, but his body was so thin that if he had had ribs one could have counted them. We baited a big hook with a piece of beef, as we could not find the harpoon, and dropped it overboard.

"The shark must have known there was something to eat for he dived, and we thought we had him sure. In a few minutes there was a pulling on the line and we hauled in. There was the bait and hook, but no fish. The shark bobbed up suddenly right near the vessel and frightened us. My passenger almost had a fit and, rushing into the cabin, he brought up a Winchester rifle. He was a good shot and, after banging twice, the big fish rolled over dead. We rigged a tackle and slung him on the deck and got the foot-rule to measure him. He footed up 22 feet and 11 inches from nose to tail; but my! he was thin. We got a knife and went to work on him and found that the shark had been starved to death—actually starved to death.

"He had swallowed the half of a beef barrel and the open end was toward his mouth. It was full of fish and the bones of a human being. It was something new to me and I determined to find out more. We cut him open and he was so shrunken that both sides of his stomach had grown together and thus prevented the small fish, which might have escaped the barrel from entering his stomach and giving him nourishment. I had part of his backbone made into a walking cane and his mouth and head into a workbasket for my wife."

OLD-TIME NEWSPAPERS.

It is the general impression that yesterday's newspaper is not quite so interesting as to-day's, but this is not altogether true. It is true, of course, if we are after the news, but there are sometimes other questions to be considered. For instance, there is an old newspaper in the British museum called the English Mercurie, published centuries ago, which is far more interesting and valuable than to-day's London Times, even though there are persons who believe that the museum Mercurie is not an original, but a forgery.

The oldest regular newspaper published in England, we are told, was established in 1662, by a certain Thomas Butler. In France the first paper to be started was in the reign of Louis XIII.—a period when a newspaper, if it was brave enough to tell the truth, and had editors enough to satisfy the executioner, might have accomplished a great deal of good.

The first Dutch newspaper, which is still continued under the name of The Haarlem Courant, is dated January 8, 1656. It was then called De Weeckelycke Courante van Europa, and contained two folio pages of news. The first Russian newspaper was published in 1703. Peter the Great not only took part personally in its editorial composition, but in correcting proofs, as appears from sheets still in existence, in which are marks and alterations in his own hand. There are two complete copies of the first year's edition of this paper in the Imperial library of St. Petersburg. The first newspaper established in North America was the Boston News-Letter, commenced April 24, 1704. It was half a sheet of paper, 12x8 inches, and having two columns on a page. It survived for 72 years and advocated the policy of the British government at the outbreak of the revolution.

None of these newspapers ever said anything about base ball, but they make very interesting reading these days nevertheless, and if you ever come across any of them in your cellar, or under your parlor carpet, or indeed anywhere, won will be a very wise person if you take the best possible care of your find, for a single copy of any one of these papers is worth quite a hundred times the price of a copy of to-day's Herald, Times or Tribune—or to-morrow's either, for that matter.—Harper's Young People.

SUPERSTITIOUS FOLKS.

Stage People Who Think That a Chance for a Fortune Comes But Once.

Half a dozen actors lying in wait for an unsuspecting manager who might happen to stray into the Twenty-eighth street slough of despondency killed time by inwardly praying for the coming of their prey and by talking about passing members of the fraternity, says the New York Advertiser.

"I believe," said one, "that a man only gets one streak of good luck in his life, and if he doesn't take advantage of it he's in the soup ever after."

"That's all folderol," put in another. "I don't believe in luck. In the south they say "a rich man for luck, a nigger for dogs and a poor man for babies."

"Here comes a case in point," spoke up the superstitious one, "Charley Bowser." The conversation stopped until the person alluded to passed by, after which the advocate of one-time luck continued: "Charley's luck struck him the first season he began playing, for he jumped right into a good line of comedy, getting into John T. Raymond's company then playing in the Mulberry Sellers piece. They went south and did nothing but turn away business, and the ghost walked with uncommon regularity. Raymond took a fancy to Bowser and it wasn't long before Raymond and he were snatching dollars for keeps. Luck was always with Bowser, no matter how high Raymond doubled up the stakes.

"Bowser always landed them. They kept at it every spare moment. In the theater, hotels and in railroad cars. I've seen John and Bowser sitting on opposite sides of a dining-room, and as soon as Raymond caught his eye he would hold up a dollar, clap it on the table, and wait for the other to call the turn. Win or lose, it was all the same to Raymond, who did it just to whet his appetite. In about ten days Raymond was out about $2,500, and no matter how he put his money down Charley'd match him every time.

"It was a common thing to see them bounce out of the car when the train stopped in a town or on a cross-roads and toss dollars in the air at the rate of $100 a flip. Crowds of natives and darkies would gather about and gape as though they thought the coin spinners were crazy millionaires. Bowser was always on velvet. In fact, I don't think he had a losing bout with Raymond, but as he was not given to boasting, and as John was piqued by his inability to outpoint his adversary, no one knew how much Charley won that trip. Some estimated it as high as $10,000, but I guess $8,000 was nearer the amount.

"His luck that began then lasted a season or two and he got first-class engagements. He then whipped around, and though he tried starring and gets a fair engagement now and then—he's like most of us—on the side. Hullo! there goes Ben Stern. I wonder if he's looking for talent? He's gone into Taylor's. Let's see what's up," and with that they went upon Benjamin's hot trail.

A SNAKE'S HOT MEAL.

A young professional gentleman of this city recently traveled overland to Tappahannock. On the route he discovered a large black snake, slowly crawling among the branches of a tree that stood by the roadside. Following the snake with his eye, the observer saw an unusually large hornet's nest attached to one of the branches of the tree and toward which the snake was advancing.

When close to the nest the snake coiled itself about a limb, released its tail, and with it gave several hard raps upon the exterior of the nest, as if knocking for admission. The noise of the blows and the swaying of the nest caused the hornets to leave their home and prepare for an attack upon the intruder. The snake ceased tapping with its tail as soon as the hornets left the nest, uncoiled itself and quickly disappeared, taking the place of the hornets within their nest.

Presently the snake's head was seen to peer out, and his bright black eyes glistened as he anticipated a feast from which the bravest man would shrink with fear. The snake drew his head within the entrance hole to the nest until nothing was seen of it except an occasional forked tongue that darted in and out with lightning rapidity.

Thinking the coast clear the hornets began to return to their nest, when the snake took them in as rapidly as they could enter. Watching the proceedings for some time, our informant concluded that all the hornets had been safely hived, and he stood up in his buggy, tapped the nest with his whip, and awaited the result.

No hornets appearing, the nest was knocked to the ground, opened, and his snakeship discovered in a torpid condition, with his size greatly increased.

The snake was killed, and a post mortem held with the following result: Stomach stuffed with dead hornets.

GRAND OPENING.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 26, 27 and 28, of the finest display of Furs ever shown in Toledo.

ALASKA FUR HOUSE.

The New York Daily Commercial Bulletin, in discussing the responsibility of electric light companies for losses by fire caused by defective equipments, remarks: "If railroads can be legally forced to pay for fires owing their origin to sparks from locomotives not properly provided with spark arresters, why should not reckless electric light corporations be made to bear the burdens caused by their own error or fault? It is clearly possible to introduce the wires in a safe manner, and, failing to do so, the electric light companies invite trouble which should accrue to themselves instead of to innocent property owners or insurance companies. A firm legal application of these principles in a few cases would cause an awakening among the electric people as to the advisability, from a financial point of view, of installing better equipments than they have provided in the past."
